OUR 68TH YEAR, NO. 3

JANUARY 14, 1982

HEARINGS on the Big Sur Local Coastal Program were scheduled in two parts to facilitate community participation in the Coastal Commission meeting in March in Carmel, says Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley.

SUPERVISOR Michal Moore of Del Rey Oaks says it's an "outrageous lie" that the public hasn't been adequately involved with the preparation of Monterey County Local Coastal Programs.

'We haven't done anything illegal.'

Peters, Moore deny impropriety

By ROBERT MISKIMON

SUPERVISORS William Peters of Carmel Valley and Michal Moore of Del Rey Oaks remained resolute this week in the face of allegations of impropriety in their involvement with the Big Sur and Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Programs.

During public hearings on both documents last week, questions were raised about exclusion of the public and county planning staff from revisions of those documents, as well as about possibly improper "outside" influences.

Both Peters and Moore have been directly involved with the revision of the Big Sur LCP to comply with conditions imposed by the Coastal Commission before the plan can be certified.

And both were appointed as a committee of the Board of Supervisors to complete the Del Monte Forest LCP after the county planning commission failed to reach agreement on the plan.

In a public hearing Jan. 4 on the Big Sur LCP, former Central Coast Regional Coastal Commissioner Zad Leavy of Big Sur protested that the process of revision directed by Supervisor Peters "creates a picture of avoidance of public participation."

Several speakers criticized the two supervisors for scheduling consideration of a proposed transfer of development credits policy separately on Jan. 26. The TDC policy, more than any other portion of the LCP, could govern ultimate land use in Big Sur, they pointed out.

Supervisor Moore was to present a preliminary outline of his TDC proposal at the Jan. 4 hearing, but instead announced that the element wasn't complete and would not be ready for another couple of weeks.

Supervisor Peters, who has conducted eight meetings with Coastal Commission staff and members to resolve differences between the county-developed Big Sur LCP and the state conditions, indicated in a cover letter to supervisors:

"Supervisor Moore will review the proposed TDC system with the board at the Jan. 4 hearing. However, we strongly recommend that no action be taken on it until the Jan. 26 hearing. This will provide an opportunity for all interested parties to thoroughly review the proposal prior to final consideration."

Added to the general confusion over not only the scheduling of the LCP in two parts but also the workings of the transfer of development credits — which remained incomprehensible to many — was the longstanding criticism that the public had been excluded from revision of the LCP at a critical stage. (See related story elsewhere in this issue on transfer of development credits).

THE CHARGE of public exclusion had been raised by Roger Newell, chairman of the Big Sur Citizens Advisory Committee which was instrumental in preparation of the original LCP, by Rod Holmgren, a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee on the Carmel area LCP — as well as by others.

Similar allegations surfaced Jan. 5 as supervisors conducted a continued public hearing on the Del Monte Forest LCP.

Anne Holliday of Carmel, president of Friends of Grove, told the board she will request a grand jury investigation into "a possible perversion of the legal process" by Peters and Moore in connection with the Del Monte LCP.

Mrs. Holliday said FOG wants a probe of whether the two Monterey Peninsula supervisors were unduly influenced by a Pebble Beach Corp. consultant in preparation of the LCP plan presented for public hearing in November.

That plan is characterized by "the general relaxation of development standards and increases in density consistent with the desires of the Pebble Beach Corp, and by the exclusion of the public from having any input into the formulation of this so-called Peters-Moore plan," Mrs. Holliday said.

At the Nov. 23 public hearing on the Del Monte LCP, Mrs. Janice O'Brien, chairwoman of The Forest Committee representing 450 Pebble Beach families, said the LCP prepared by Peters and Moore is unacceptable because of density levels, the lack of contiguous open space, and access. That position has also been endorsed by the Carmel City Council.

The Peters-Moore plan would permit 1,496

About Bay School

Dear Editor:

During the recent months, there has been much discussion about school closure. We wonder if the Carmel community knows exactly what takes place at our Little Red Schoolhouse.

Bay School now has three separate programs operating during the week from 8:15 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Each program is at maximum capacity, thereby accommodating about 70 children. Since the beginning of the school year, Bay School has been totally self-supporting. Our operating expenses are met by charging a monthly fee and by receiving A.D.A. from the adults attending classes in parent education.

To keep our costs down, parents contribute time to the maintenance of the property, buy necessary equipment, and do fund-raising events, such as our annual Bay Day.

A successful summer program enables the facility to be used year-round. This program, in fact, makes money for the district. It also provides a stimulating activity program for children at a time when there is little else to do. It also provides affordable day care to the entire community.

We, at Bay School, are totally committed to providing the best possible learning environment for the children of Carmel without costing the Carmel Unified School District any additional funds. I hope this gives your readers the accurate information.

Good people still here

Dear Editor:

Recently a friend and I were on a tour in your city and on Xmas Eve she fell and broke her left leg. The manager of the coffee shop where we were just leaving called the volunteer fire ambulance and they were so very kind and attentive to us, taking us directly to the Community Hospital. This was done at no charge and the greatest courtesy.

The hospital was so wonderful. All the nurses, doctors and pink ladies did everything they could for our comfort. We were so surprised that people could be so kind to strangers.

We will never forget all the nice things that happened to us all the way through the ordeal to the airport where we boarded Air California to return home.

I want the residents in Carmel to know about all this because I assure you it was unusual and gave us a feeling that there are a lot of good people left in this world.

The very best to you all in 1982.

Dear Editor:

Thank you for the opportunity of expressing the goals of the Carmel Foundation in the Pine Cone's first issue of 1982 and letting Carmel residents know about our Future Plans Fund Drive.

To clear the record, the Future Project Fund was established at our Thirtieth (30) anniversary (April 1981) not the thirteenth as stated in the Pine Cone.

Yours very truly,

Locals in picture

Dear Editor:

The second printing of the photo (page 5A, Dec. 31, 1981) depicting a parade up Ocean Avenue prompts me (woman in foreground with four children) to write.

I have lived here going on twenty years. My children (on my right) were born at the Community Hospital, as were the children on my left, who, by the way, are third generation Carmelites and the great-grand children of A.M. Allen, who originally owned Point Lobos.

We gathered, along with a few hundred other "locals" at Devendorf Park to hear our local pipe band a week before the Highland Games. Then we proceeded to march a few blocks down Ocean and back. To be sure, many of the tourists on the sidewalks joined us. Who doesn't love a parade?

This event was not, I'm certain, widely publicized. The "locals" had gathered for a local event. To imply that we were "hordes of tourists relentlessly searching for trinkets and souvenirs" and represented as a nightmare (front page, Oct. 15, 1981) is misleading.

It is ironic that you use a photo of a local event to dramatize your concern that locally oriented businesses are forced to leave town. I suspect most of us in the photo share your concerns. The issue of astronomical rents might be the result of the greed of many landlords, some of them absent, rather than the tourists and "locals" who frequent Carmel.

Sincerely,
Marguerite Moore

A crisis at Carmel Library - again!

By AL EISNER

CARMEL'S HARRISON Memorial Library is in crisis — again . . . and this time it looks serious.

The city goes through a macabre annual dance with the county on the question of how much the county should pay for the services the municipal library gives to county residents.

Although there are twice as many cardholders outside the city limits as within, the city received only $160,000 (the total budget for Harrison Memorial Library exceeds $400,000) to service non-residents.

And, if that isn't bad enough, the county may cut the grant to a mere $30,000 (see story page A-7).

In the meantime, the library board of trustees has wisely placed plans for a new library annex on the back burner until the issue can be resolved.

Even if the city is able to wring some more dollars out of the county, the inequity is going to continue — and Carmel taxpayers are taking it on the chin.

About ten years ago, when the library board drew up plans for a shiny new library at Sunset Center, it was turned down by a resounding 3-1 margin when the voters were asked for their opinion. It is unlikely that the library board will ask the voters for their opinion on whether or not the city should build an expensive (in excess of $1 million for land and structure) library annex diagonally across the street from the present building on Lincoln and Sixth.

The money could be spent for far more pressing needs in the community — affordable housing, parking, recreation for seniors and youth, transportation — but those, more immediate needs don't seem to have a very high priority in the minds of the people who presently serve on the City Council.

The Mayor's Report

Carmel spared ravages of storm

By BARNEY LAIOLO

To say that we were blessed during the last storm would be putting it mildly. When one thinks of the problems our neighbors in Santa Cruz had, and the great losses in Marin County we should thank our lucky stars that it didn't happen here.

We weren't without our problems, however, and I would like to take this time to congratulate the Street and Forestry Departments for the very efficient and capable way they handled the problems we had. This goes to show how these men have been trained, and the results of this training during the last storm proved they are ready to handle whatever problems come along.

The effective way they handled the fallen tree at the Surf Tides Motel, the repairing and backfilling that had to be done at Forest Hill Park and the general cleanup of fallen trees and limbs around town was exceptional.

Kudos to all who had a part and dug in and got the job done!

If you read the article in the January 7 Pine Cone regarding goals of the Carmel Foundation, you would have been informed about the "Future Projects Fund" program that has been initiated at the Carmel Foundation.

I know many are interested in helping with this worthwhile cause, and donations of all sizes would help to achieve the goal the Foundation has set for taking care of our elderly.

The time has come to consider the coming City elections which will be held in April. The opening date for taking out candidacy papers is January 14. The terms of office which terminate this year are those of the Mayor and two Councilpersons (Laiolo, Brown and Brunn). The closing date to file is February 4, at 5 p.m. I do hope we will have a good response by interested, mature and responsible citizens willing to serve their term.

A joint meeting of the City Council and the Forestry Commission was held Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was primarily a study session to discuss the progress of ongoing projects. These joint meetings with the hard working volunteer commissioners help to improve communications with all concerned.

I would like to close by thanking God for sparing us from the ravages of the last storm.

Sincerely Smiling
Mayor Barney

Council wrestles with timesharing; hearing continues to Feb. 2

"THE PLANNING commission feels this is a foot in the door. Once it's started, it's very hard to stop."

Carmel Planning Director gave that assessment of timesharing to the City Council before hearings on a prohibitive ordinance were continued to Feb. 2.

The proposed ordinance would ban timesharing in all areas of the city and was recommended for adoption by a 6-1 vote of the planning commission, after that body had studied and held hearings for months on the issue.

As defined by City Administrator Doug Peterson, timesharing is "a subdivision of property, or at least a division of property based not only on location or a portion of a building, but also based upon the time when someone is entitled to occupy that property."

In one of the most common forms of timesharing an individual purchases the right to use a designated portion of time for a fixed period. In another common form, a purchaser acquires an equity interest in the property and may hold that interest indefinitely.

Peterson advised the council that some concerns related to timesharing center on "high pressure sales tactics used to market sub-standard properties" and methods to guarantee consumer protection involved with maintenance of timesharing projects.

Several speakers urged the City Council during a Jan. 5 hearing on the ordinance to exempt the C-1-S (commercial-service) and C-1-L (hotel, motel and apartment) zones from the ordinance.

Griggs pointed out after the meeting that the C-1-S zone encompasses 22 acres, or about half of the total commercial area of Carmel.

Mayor Barney Laiolo asked whether it might be possible to permit limited timesharing for a period of two years "on a trial basis" so that investors could have their monies refunded from a trust if the use were later rescinded.

But the mayor got no takers on his proposal.

"When we sent this down to the planning commission it was with the thought that this would never be acceptable in the residential district, with one or two tiny exceptions. I've never heard anything to the contrary," said Councilman Howard Brunn.

Matthew Little of Carmel said he had spent "months" studying timesharing and said he supports it prohibition — except in the C-1-S district.

"I ask you to exempt the C-1 district," Little said. "Timesharing is virtually transparent to the community because it's so closely resembles the visitor use."

LITTLE ARGUED that purchasers of timesharing units would have the same "economic incentives" as other property owners to maintain their property.

Besides, timesharing could produce positive effects upon traffic congestion, water use, energy consumption, and esthetics, Little said.

Attorney Don Hubbard urged the council to consider exemption of both the C-1-S and C-1-L districts, on behalf of Michael Pelouquin who "is interested in acquiring property" for timesharing in Carmel.

"This affords a method by which the upgrading of these units can be accomplished," Hubbard said. "It affords flexibility to the land owner and to the community."

Ron Williams, manager of the Candlelight

Inn, said "people have a certain pride of ownership in a timesharing unit."

"They have a timesharing program at Laguna Beach that has not increased the turnover. I think it should be limited to the C-1-S and C-1-L zones. I don't think it belongs in 99 percent of the town."

John Eatherton of Carmel told the council he is opposed to "slick new buildings" to bring more tourists into Carmel.

"Why must we open the door one more time to tourist-oriented businesses?" Eatherton asked. "Tourists come here to see the trees and the ocean — not the tourist shops."

"It's not a question of whether we should have timesharing in the R-1 district," said Planning Commissioner John Logan. "The problem is what is wrong with timesharing in the C-1-S and C-1-L districts?"

"The Coastal Commission says if you have timesharing you will not have as many people as if you have a hotel-motel use. That leaves me cold. If we had a timesharing operation in the hands of people like the Little family, they could run a first-class operation."

"I urge you not to consider the stranger," Logan said.

Transfer of development credit: how it will work in Big Sur

By ROBERT MISKIMON

IT'S BEEN CALLED "revolutionary," a policy that could profoundly change land use in Monterey County.

It's also been called confusing, inequitable, and difficult to administer.

But most commonly it's known as the transfer of development credit (TDC) system, a sophisticated land use concept that attempts to balance environmental protection with the preservation of economic value of the land.

A transfer of development credit system, which has yet to see the light of day, will form the keystone of the Big Sur Local Coastal Program and may be the forerunner of similar TDCs throughout California.

First District Monterey County Supervisor Michal Moore, an economist who wrote a master's thesis on TDCs, has been assigned by the Board of Supervisors to write the TDC policy for the Big Sur Local Coastal Program.

That policy was to have been reviewed by supervisors at a Jan. 4 public hearing on the LCP, but was rescheduled for consideration Jan. 26. Supervisor Moore — who has revealed very little about what will be in the TDC policy — has promised to release the document Jan. 16.

But what, precisely, is a transfer of development credit system?

The concept was developed about 20 years and has been implemented most notably in Montgomery County, Maryland to preserve 83,000 acres of prime agricultural land, and in East Coast cities where it has been used to preserve historic areas from demolition.

More recently, the TDC concept has been tested as a pilot project by the Coastal Commission in the Santa Monica Mountains-Malibu Local Coastal Program. It has never been proposed or implemented in Monterey County.

The concept is simple. The transfer of development credit system establishes conservation areas of no, or extremely limited, development and encourages an increased density of development on other sites.

It enables land owners in the conservation areas to realize some economic potential from their land through the sale of development credits to purchasers, who may then apply those credits to projects in the areas of increased density.

"The density transfer concept is essentially a system that identifies the potential development density in the conservation area, severs this potential density from the land, and encourages its transfer to the development area by permitting higher density development if the developer has purchased sufficient potential development density from the conservation area," according to an analysis by planning consultants Sedway-Cooke of San Francisco.

"UNDER THIS system, the development potential of the conservation area is transferred to other areas which can accommodate the higher densities without causing environmental damage, creating incompatible land uses, or putting heavy strains upon the existing infrastructure."

The mechanism by which this transfer of development occurs is the density unit, which is assigned through the specific TDC policy. Density units can be bought and sold by land owners and developers to compensate property owners in conservation areas and to enable developers to intensify density in certain designated areas.

"The system results in the preservation of lands with high resource values while at the same time providing the owners of these lands with some compensation for the restriction," according to the Sedway-Cooke analysis. "Public ownership of the lands is not required."

The appeal of the transfer of development credit system is obvious in light of the expressed intention of the Big Sur Local Coastal Program to preserve and protect vast scenic resources along the unique 70-mile stretch of coastline within that planning area.

Saunders Hillyer is a Monterey attorney who acquired a working knowledge of TDCs in his former position as executive director of the Big Sur Foundation. He says flatly of the Big Sur TDC:

VAST STRETCHES of the Big Sur coastline would be protected from development in the Big Sur Local Coastal Program through a transfer of density credit system. The mechanism would protect areas in the critical viewshed, particularly those west of Highway 1 visible in the photograph, from development and permit intensified land use in other areas. The proposed TDC policy — which could become a model for conservation plans statewide — is to be reviewed by the Board of Supervisors Jan. 26. It attempts to eliminate the "windfalls and wipeouts" inherent in most restrictive land use plans.

"It will be the most profound land use policy ever implemented in Monterey County. It's a revolutionary concept in land use."

The difference between a transfer of development credit system and the traditional approach to planning and zoning is that the former attempts to provide equity for both conservation land owners and developers, while the latter merely establishes defined land uses with no attempt to mitigate economic inequities that result, Hillyer said.

"Those kinds of land use decisions are being made anyway," he said. "The question is, how do you make it fair? The transfer of development credits introduces a system of evening out the windfalls and wipeouts that occur in most zoning decisions."

Here's how the TDC system would work in a hypothetical situation:

A land owner on the Big Sur coast whose property is restrictively zoned because it is in development rights to his land while maintaining ownership; and the developer would acquire the right to develop — in areas designated by the county.

Hillyer believes the crux of a workable TDC system is the provision of a guarantee to the property owner in the conservation, or critical viewshed area, of adequate compensation for development rights to his land.

"That part of the system will be difficult to guarantee," he said. "In the Santa Monica plan, the California Coastal Conservancy buys the development rights as a purchaser of last resort, and can then resell those rights. In the Big Sur LCP, this could be done by the county, the Big Sur Land Trust, or by some other agency."

That's where the expertise will be needed in the development of an effective TDC for Big Sur, Hillyer said.

"A system could be designed to produce such incentives that development occurs in the areas you want, by creating a market structured in such a way that there is a demand to develop in those places," he said. "Tons of people are talking about it, but there's a dearth of experience."

Supervisor Moore said the TDC policy which he will present combines features of the plan in operation in Maryland, Chicago, and in Santa Monica.

"The exchange of values is the same basic principle in all the plans. It's not a new concept — possibly a new application. There are still some bugs I'm working on."

The outline of the TDC policy included in the revised Big Sur LCP, which was developed in response to Coastal Commission recommendations attached to its conditional approval, gives a general sense of the direction of Moore's proposal.

It suggests designation of existing parcels of record with less than 30 percent cross slope which otherwise meet county standards as buildable parcels at the rate of one residence per parcel.

"Resource constraint areas" with significantly reduced buildout potential would be established, based on such limitations as fire safety, road safety and capacity, water, and sanitation facilities.

The transfer of development credits system would permit the transfer of development potential from resource constraint areas, as well as properties in the critical viewshed, to other buildable sites outside those areas, according to the latest LCP revision.

THE BASIC outline of the TDC policy suggests that one "density credit" be allocated to each parcel in the Big Sur LCP area on the basis of each increment of 40 acres.

For instance, an 80 acre parcel would have a base density of one residence and one density credit. A 440-acre parcel would be allocated a base density of one residence and 10 density credits.

One application of the TDC policy would be to allow construction of new visitor-serving units, or enlargement of existing ones, through the transfer of density credits. The LCP states, however, that the ceiling of 750 new visitor-serving units and 100 new land divisions in Big Sur must be maintained.

Crucial to the transfer of development credit system is the method by which density credits are assigned to land parcels. In a special document prepared for Monterey County in 1980 by Carmel Valley attorney Alexander Henson, several methods of density credit assignment are discussed:

- Allocation of one credit per vacant parcel. This method would treat large and small properties alike and could operate unfairly with respect to the larger properties, Henson concluded.

- Allocation of one credit per dwelling unit that would be allowed under existing zoning.

- Assignment of density credits based upon the land owner's proportion of acreage to the overall acreage of vacant land. This system would ignore actual land value and be cumbersome to administer, Henson said.

- Designation of credits based upon the actual assessed value of the land. This approach, Henson indicated, "is the only approach totally based upon value" and it would be the fairest and most easily administered of the alternatives.

Since the Henson analysis was prepared, it has languished in the archives of the county courthouse, as has the work of planning staff personnel who worked on the TDC concept until Supervisor Moore intervened and took over the task.

"It will be the most profound land use policy ever implemented in Monterey County. It's a revolutionary concept in land use."

the "critical viewshed" area could sell density credits from his land to a developer who wished to build a guest house in a "receiving" area of high density.

THE DEVELOPER would acquire the right to use the density credits purchased from the land owner in the conservation area upon the recordation of a scenic easement with the county.

The preservation of the land would thus be guaranteed, in theory; the property owners would be compensated for the loss of

Water use, display case ordinances up for review

A PROPOSED ORDINANCE that would give the city broad powers over water use if Carmel consumes more than 95 percent of its allocation will be considered by the Planning Commission Jan. 20.

Commissioners will also review a proposed ordinance that would amend current city regulations governing display cases and signs.

Carmel may have already exceeded 95 percent of its water allocation, according to Planning Commissioner John Logan.

There is a "fair chance" California-American Water Company figures will show that Carmel has exceeded 95 percent of its allocation when they are released early this year, said Logan, who drafted the proposed ordinance.

Carmel is allocated 1,109 acre feet per year, or 5.545 percent of the available water supply. For the year-long period ending June 30, 1981, Carmel used 1,037 acre feet, or 93.8 percent of its allocation, according to Cal-Am figures.

Logan, a private water resources consultant, said he feels that Carmel should adopt a set of use regulations voluntarily before the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District imposes its own restrictions on the city.

Logan added that he would probably propose amendments to the ordinance he wrote when the commission meets. He said one addition would provide the city with broader enforcement powers.

LOGAN'S PROPOSED ordinance provides two stages of restrictions. Stage one, which would go into effect immediately when Cal-Am water use figures show that Carmel has reached 95 percent of its allocation, invokes the following restrictions:

- No new construction or change of land use would be permitted if it would increase water use.

- Landscape irrigation would be limited to an odd-even system.

- Sidewalks and public areas could not be cleaned with water.

- No fountains or pools could be operated unless equipped with a water recirculation system.

- Automobiles could only be washed with water hand-carried in a bucket.

Should use increase to 98 percent of the allocation limit, the ordinance would invoke a series of stage two regulations, including:

- Continued application of stage one restrictions.

- Limitation on landscape irrigation to five days per month.

Under the proposed ordinance, all new development plans must first receive Board of Zoning Adjustments approval. First priority would be granted to undeveloped lots in R-1 districts. Second priority would go to developments in other zones that "would increase the permanent housing stock of the city."

COMMISSIONERS WILL also review a proposed ordinance that would amend cur-

DISPLAY CASES will no longer be allowed that advertise businesses located in other areas of Carmel under a proposed ordinance that will be considered by the Planning Commission Jan. 20. This display case, viewed by Kevin Danby of Meriden, Conn. and Jeff Budd of Salinas, contains golf equipment rent regulations governing signs and display cases. The ordinance was drawn up by city planning staff with the cooperation of the Carmel Business Association.

If adopted, the ordinance would not apply to current display cases and signs, according to Planning Director Bob Griggs. However, new signs would have to go through the permit process, he said.

A section of the proposed ordinance amends how sign size is determined. The present law only takes into account the sign. The proposed ordinance would include the frame as part of the sign size.

There are several new stipulations governing display cases contained within the proposed ordinance:

- All display cases will be in size and scale with their surroundings.

- Display cases shall not exceed 10 square feet in area or 60 cubic feet in volume.

- Display cases shall be located on the business premises.

- All display cases shall be maintained under terms of the approval permit.

- Merchandise displayed inside the case shall be typical of products sold in the business.

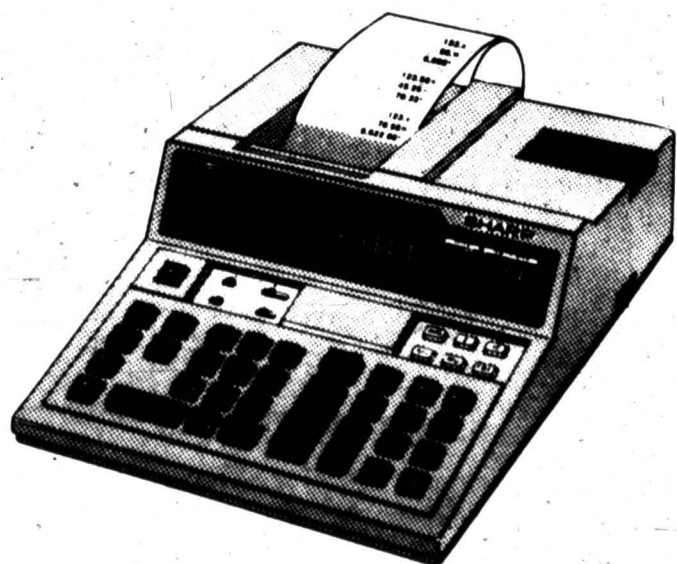

If approved by planners, the two ordinances will be sent to the City Council for final adoption.

Griggs said the ordinance was drafted because "there were complaints against display cases that were serving primarily as signs for other businesses. There has been a proliferation of these display cases advertising businesses in completely different areas."

The council had considered adopting regulations on display cases during an early June session. However, final action was postponed until the Carmel Business Association could confer and make recommendations.

The Commission will meet at 4 p.m. at City Hall.

City urges adoption of 'trigger' mechanisms

THE CITY of Carmel wants to make sure that the environmental impact report for the Carmel Valley Master Plan includes "trigger" mechanisms to tie development levels to environmental effects.

To insure that those mechanisms — previously outlined in a letter from the City Council to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors — are fully explored, the council has retained Carmel Valley attorney Zan Henson.

It was Henson who, as special counsel to the city of Carmel, brought the lawsuit against Monterey County which forced preparation of the EIR.

The Carmel City Council agreed at its Jan. 5 meeting to hire Henson to review the final draft of the EIR prepared by Sedway-Cooke of San Francisco. The Board of Supervisors has scheduled a public hearing on the EIR Feb. 2 at the courthouse in Salinas.

Once the final EIR is certified, the court-ordered revision of the Carmel Valley Master Plan can proceed. A moratorium on new development in the Valley is in effect until June to allow time for revision.

Both Carmel and the CVPOA specifically recommend that a system which links Valley development to environmental effects be included in the revised Master Plan. The "trigger" mechanisms proposed by the city of Carmel and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association are "useful" and "noteworthy" and should be "carefully considered," according to the EIR, although it does not specifically recommend their inclusion in the revised Master Plan.

The proposal advanced by both Carmel and the CVPOA would articulate "performance criteria" to be used to halt development when certain precisely-defined environmental effects are measured in the areas of ground water and air pollution, traffic congestion, water supplies, and noise levels.

City Administrator Doug Peterson advised the council it is "timely and urgent" to review the Master Plan EIR in detail before the Feb. 2 hearing.

"Once the environmental impact report has been certified and based on this certification, the Master Plan adopted, further action in terms of zoning, use permits and other development within Carmel Valley will take on a much more routine character," Peterson said.

"This is the stage at which anyone interested in development within Carmel Valley has the most leverage and the most opportunity to guide future development within Carmel Valley."

Henson is to review the final EIR and prepare comments consistent with prior positions of the city for review at the Jan. 19 council meeting.

In addition, the council appointed a citizens committee of five persons — one named by each council member — to review the revised Carmel area Local Coastal Program before a special Board of Supervisors hearing on the document Feb. 12.

The committee members are Jean Grace, nominated by Councilman Howard Brunn; Earl Power, named by Councilwoman Helen Arnold; Harold Lillard, named by Councilman Mike Brown; Gene Cava, named by Mayor Barney Laiolo; and David Maradei, named by Councilman Frank Lloyd.

Both the Carmel Valley Master Plan EIR and the Carmel area LCP have concerned the City Council in the past, and final review and comments should now be forwarded at this critical time, Peterson said.

Results of the committee review of the Carmel area LCP will be considered by the council in a special to be called before the supervisors' Feb. 1 hearing on the LCP.

The LCP will then be returned to the Coastal Commission for certification.

Filing opens for Carmel council elections

THE FILING period for candidates for Carmel City Council opens today (Jan. 14) and closes Feb. 4.

The election April 13 is for two, four-year council seats and the mayor's two-year term of office. The two council members whose terms will expire are Mike Brown and Howard Brunn; Mayor Barney Laiolo's term also will expire.

Nomination petitions are available from the city clerk's office at Carmel City Hall, Monte Verde and Ocean.

Water use, display case ordinances up for review

A PROPOSED ORDINANCE that would give the city broad powers over water use if Carmel consumes more than 95 percent of its allocation will be considered by the Planning Commission Jan. 20.

Commissioners will also review a proposed ordinance that would amend current city regulations governing display cases and signs. Carmel may have already exceeded 95 percent of its water allocation, according to Planning Commissioner John Logan.

There is a "fair chance" California-American Water Company figures will show that Carmel has exceeded 95 percent of its allocation when they are released early this year, said Logan, who drafted the proposed ordinance.

Carmel is allocated 1,109 acre feet per year, or 5.545 percent of the available water supply. For the year-long period ending June 30, 1981, Carmel used 1,037 acre feet, or 93.8 percent of its allocation, according to Cal-Am figures.

Logan, a private water resources consultant, said he feels that Carmel should adopt a set of use regulations voluntarily before the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District imposes its own restrictions on the city.

Logan added that he would probably propose amendments to the ordinance he wrote when the commission meets. He said one addition would provide the city with broader enforcement powers.

LOGAN'S PROPOSED ordinance provides two stages of restrictions. Stage one, which would go into effect immediately when Cal-Am water use figures show that Carmel has reached 95 percent of its allocation, invokes the following restrictions:

- No new construction or change of land use would be permitted if it would increase water use.
- Landscape irrigation would be limited to an odd-even system.
- Sidewalks and public areas could not be cleaned with water.
- No fountains or pools could be operated unless equipped with a water recirculation system.
- Automobiles could only be washed with water hand-carried in a bucket.

Should use increase to 98 percent of the allocation limit, the ordinance would invoke a series of stage two regulations, including:

- Continued application of stage one restrictions.
- Limitation on landscape irrigation to five days per month.

Under the proposed ordinance, all new development plans must first receive Board of Zoning Adjustments approval. First priority would be granted to undeveloped lots in R-1 districts. Second priority would go to developments in other zones that "would increase the permanent housing stock of the city."

COMMISSIONERS WILL also review a proposed ordinance that would amend current regulations governing signs and display cases. The ordinance was drawn up by city planning staff with the cooperation of the Carmel Business Association.

If adopted, the ordinance would not apply to current display cases and signs, according to Planning Director Bob Griggs. However, new signs would have to go through the permit process, he said.

A section of the proposed ordinance amends how sign size is determined. The present law only takes into account the sign. The proposed ordinance would include the frame as part of the sign size.

There are several new stipulations governing display cases contained within the proposed ordinance:

- All display cases will be in size and scale with their surroundings.
- Display cases shall not exceed 10 square feet in area or 60 cubic feet in volume.
- Display cases shall be located on the business premises.
- All display cases shall be maintained under terms of the approval permit.
- Merchandise displayed inside the case shall be typical of products sold in the business.

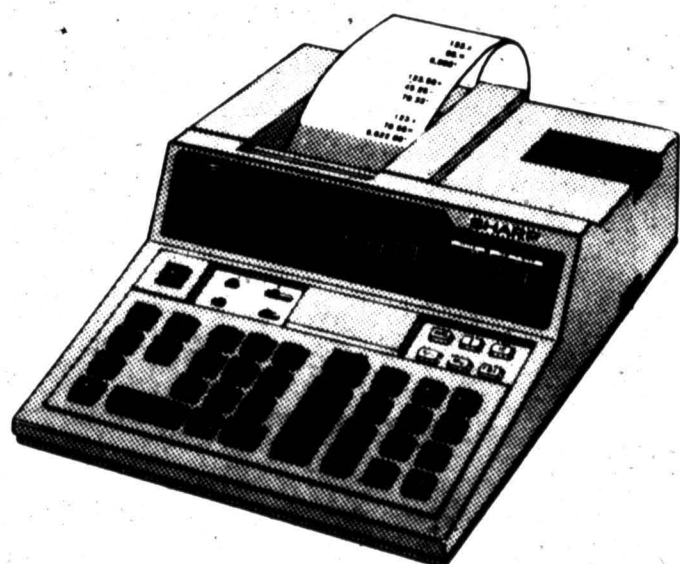

If approved by planners, the two ordinances will be sent to the City Council for final adoption.

Griggs said the ordinance was drafted because "there were complaints against display cases that were serving primarily as signs for other businesses. There has been a proliferation of these display cases advertising businesses in completely different areas."

The council had considered adopting regulations on display cases during an early June session. However, final action was postponed until the Carmel Business Association could confer and make recommendations.

The Commission will meet at 4 p.m. at City Hall.

additional new residences in Pebble Beach, for a total of 4,341. A 270-unit hotel is also envisioned.

Supervisor Moore, who outlined the Del Monte Forest LCP at the Jan. 5 hearing, said he relied upon "reams of documents" in its preparation, including the 1977 development plan proposed by the Pebble Beach Corp., which would have allowed 200 more units than the current plan, Moore said. "This plan contains all the elements of a Master Plan, as well as a Local Coastal Program," Supervisor Peters said of the Del Monte LCP. "When the board received the referral from the planning commission, there was an original staff document."

"There was a report by the planning commission majority and by a planning commission subcommittee. We had three documents at that point — three competing systems — and the staff proposal was significantly different from anything we'd seen."

Carmel Valley attorney Alexander Henson said the fact that the LCP was drawn from different sources makes it a new plan, and one that must first be considered by the planning commission.

"THIS IS the second hearing on this plan and I hope this is the last time this process is followed by the board," Henson said. "Generally, we have the planning director making the presentation. You have prepared what is in essence a staff report and then you're asked to vote on it."

Police Chief appointment expected this week or next

CARMEL City Administrator Doug Peterson said he expects to appoint a new police chief either this week or next.

Peterson said nine finalists — including Capt. Bob Fischer — were selected from among 40 applicants for the position vacated when former Chief Bill Ellis retired Dec. 31.

The eight finalists were interviewed last week and Fischer will be interviewed this week, Peterson said.

The selection of a new police chief has become a center of controversy, with petitions bearing the names of hundreds of Carmel residents in support of Fischer presented to the City Council last month. Letters to the editor have been numerous on both sides of the question of outside recruitment.

Peterson said he decided to recruit outside the city for a wide selection of qualified applicants, despite the fact Fischer was recommended for the position by outgoing chief Ellis.

The position was advertised nationally and applications were screened by a San Clemente recruitment firm, before they were forwarded to Peterson for the final choice.

There are no women applicants, but one who is "arguably Spanish-surnamed" although probably not technically an ethnic minority, Peterson revealed. "This is a very important, sensitive position in the city," Peterson said. "I'm looking for someone who has a strong law enforcement background, strong leadership ability, and the ability to fit in with the community."

"I will do some followup interviews and whatever else I need to do to answer any further questions or resolve any questions I have. I hope to make the appointment as early as possible this month."

"If you've noticed that the company and the Del Monte Forest Property Owners are united in this effort, you're 100 percent correct."

Public works director Bruce McClain advised the board in a memo that traffic problems which would result on Highway 68 as a result of implementation of the plan are a concern to his department.

To alleviate traffic problems, a new vehicular entrance to Del Monte Forest from Highway 68 for resident and service vehicles should be provided, McClain said. The location of the entrance should be determined by traffic studies to encourage its use by residents, he added.

County planning director Ed De Mars told the Pine Cone/Outlook that county planning staff has been totally excluded from the development of the Big Sur LCP transfer of development credit policy. Bill Farrel was the county staff planner who worked on the document until he was reassigned to the North Monterey County LCP and Supervisor Moore took over the writing of a TDC policy

"I have no comment at all. If she wants to refer it to the grand jury, that's her prerogative."

BOTH PETERS and Moore said they would not respond to the allegations by Mrs. Holliday on behalf of Friends of Grove.

"It's not worthy of a response," Supervisor Moore said. "There are no facts in that letter."

"I have no comment at all," Supervisor Peters said. "If she wants to refer it to the grand jury, that's her prerogative."

Moore said he had held discussions with Larry Seeman — the consultant to Pebble Beach Corp. mentioned by Mrs. Holliday — but they had been "only as a source of data for me." He denied that Seeman or anyone else had exerted any undue influence over him in preparation of the Del Monte Forest LCP.

Was there anything improper about exclusion of the county planning staff from development of the transfer of development credit policy in the Big Sur LCP?

"Nah," Moore replied. "I had more knowledge going in than anybody else. I wrote my master's thesis on TDCs."

Peters noted that Moore had been assigned to the Big Sur TDC because of his training as an economist and because "there is no expertise in that area on the staff."

"Nobody on the staff knows anything about TDCs," Peters said.

Has there been an erosion of public confidence caused by the way in which both LCPs have been revised by Peters and Moore?

"It's an out-and-out lie that the public has not been involved," Moore said. "The public has been intimately involved over a long period of time. This charge is made over and over again but I've never seen any hard evidence to back it up."

"I can understand why these criticisms are levelled but I don't think they're justified. We haven't done anything illegal."

Peters also denied that any public participation has been short-circuited.

"Both our pages for the Big Sur and Del Monte Forest are just that — a report and a proposal. They will be discussed, aired and modified. Nothing is final. It's a matter of getting a document we can work with."

The Big Sur LCP was scheduled in two hearings so that the bulk of the plan could be forwarded to the Coastal Commission by Jan. 6, in order to have the entire document on the March 3-4 agenda when the state board will meet in Carmel, Peters said. Because of board's decision not to act until Jan. 26, that deadline can not be met.

"When we put forth this proposal, we put it forth trying to conform to a community time schedule to get it on the March hearing, to give the public maximum exposure," Peters said.

IF YOU don't make those dates then you disenfranchise the people who live here. By taking more time to review the Big Sur LCP, it means it won't be heard in March. Then we're faced with a tradeoff: do we wait three or four months until the Coastal Commission might meet here again, or do we schedule it as soon as possible when they might be meeting in Eureka?"

Michal Moore's TDC proposal is to be released Jan. 16, or 10 days in advance of the Jan. 26 hearing date, to permit public review.

Consideration of the Del Monte Forest LCP has been continued to 3 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 2 to enable the county staff to prepare a comparative analysis of the various prior versions. No public testimony will be taken Feb. 2, but written comments will be received by the Board of Supervisors until Jan. 18.

Meanwhile, the Citizens Advisory Committee which developed the original Carmel area LCP has been reactivated to discuss key areas of difference between the county-submitted plan and Coastal Commission staff recommendations.

The committee will meet at 7 p.m. at the Highlands Inn Jan. 14 and 21 to review development proposals for the eastern 134 acres of the Odello Ranch, the Hudson-Riley properties near Point Lobos, and other proposed development sites south of the Carmel River.

The Carmel area LCP was denied certification by the Coastal Commission and returned to the county to seek resolution of areas of disagreement with the Coastal Commission staff.

The Board of Supervisors has scheduled a special public hearing on the revised version of the Carmel area LCP for Feb. 1 at the county courthouse in Salinas.

City library officials willing to compromise

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A CONSULTANT to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors feels that reimbursements to city libraries must be cut. City librarians feel that drastic budget cuts may leave them little choice but to stop services to patrons living outside city limits. Can a compromise be reached?

That is the question that faces city librarians and administrators when they meet with Monterey County Administrator Richard Andrews January 18.

Administrators and librarians from Carmel, Pacific Grove, Monterey and Salinas agreed in a special joint staff meeting January 8 to unanimously oppose consultant David Sabsay's recommendations.

Administrators contacted after the meeting said a compromise would allow the county to cut some reimbursements, but would also guarantee city libraries enough funds to provide services to out-of-city patrons.

Pacific Grove City Manager Gary Bales said one possible compromise discussed would be to give the county and the city funding "safeguards." This would provide an agreement that the county would not reimburse cities for more than 25 percent of its library budget. The city safeguard would be that the county would reimburse libraries for 85 percent of the costs of providing service to non-resident patrons.

A final proposal to Andrews was not expected to be drafted until late this week, said Bales.

Carmel City Administrator Doug Peterson described the Jan. 8 joint staff meeting as "constructive. I felt good about the meeting and the mutual position. I'm optimistic a compromise can be reached."

Monterey City Manager John Dunn said the cities have "a common viewpoint, but a lot of work still needs to be done."

City officials have indicated they want to reach a compromise before the Board of Supervisors schedules a public hearing on the consultant's recommendation.

In a $30,000 study commissioned by Supervisors, Sabsay proposed a new formula for determining county reimbursements to city libraries.

The new formula would mean a loss of $130,000 out of the $160,000 the county currently gives to Harrison Memorial Library.

If the county cuts its reimbursement by that amount, patrons who do not live within the city limits may face cuts or even elimination of services, according to librarian Peg Richter.

THE FRIENDS of Harrison Memorial Library has started preliminary work on a campaign to make non-resident patrons aware of the effects such budget cuts may have.

Members are compiling a list of 5,000 non-resident patrons, who will be contacted when supervisors set a date for a public hearing on the proposed cuts, and asked to contact supervisors to protest such a move.

Carmel is not the only Monterey Peninsula city that faces the cuts.

Librarians in the cities of Salinas, Monterey and Pacific Grove, when contacted Jan. 7, were unanimous in their opposition to proposed cuts in county reimbursements.

"I think it's ridiculous, completely unacceptable. The whole thing doesn't stand up to any kind of logic," said John Gross, Salinas librarian.

Gross said Salinas currently has a library budget of $1.07 million. Current county reimbursements total $95,292, but that would be cut to $37,600 if the consultant's recommendations are adopted by the supervisors.

He added there was "no way" Salinas could continue its present level of service to county residents if the cuts are adopted.

In Monterey, librarian Dorothy Steven said county patrons account for 25 percent of the total circulation. She said the budget for the library, now at $680,000, includes $89,000 in county reimbursements. The proposed cuts would reduce reimbursements to $52,366, she said.

"The point is, even at $89,000... we are really not getting full reimbursement. We would really need to get $105,000," she said.

Although initially Pacific Grove stands to benefit from the consultant's recommendation, librarian Margaret McBride opposes the cuts.

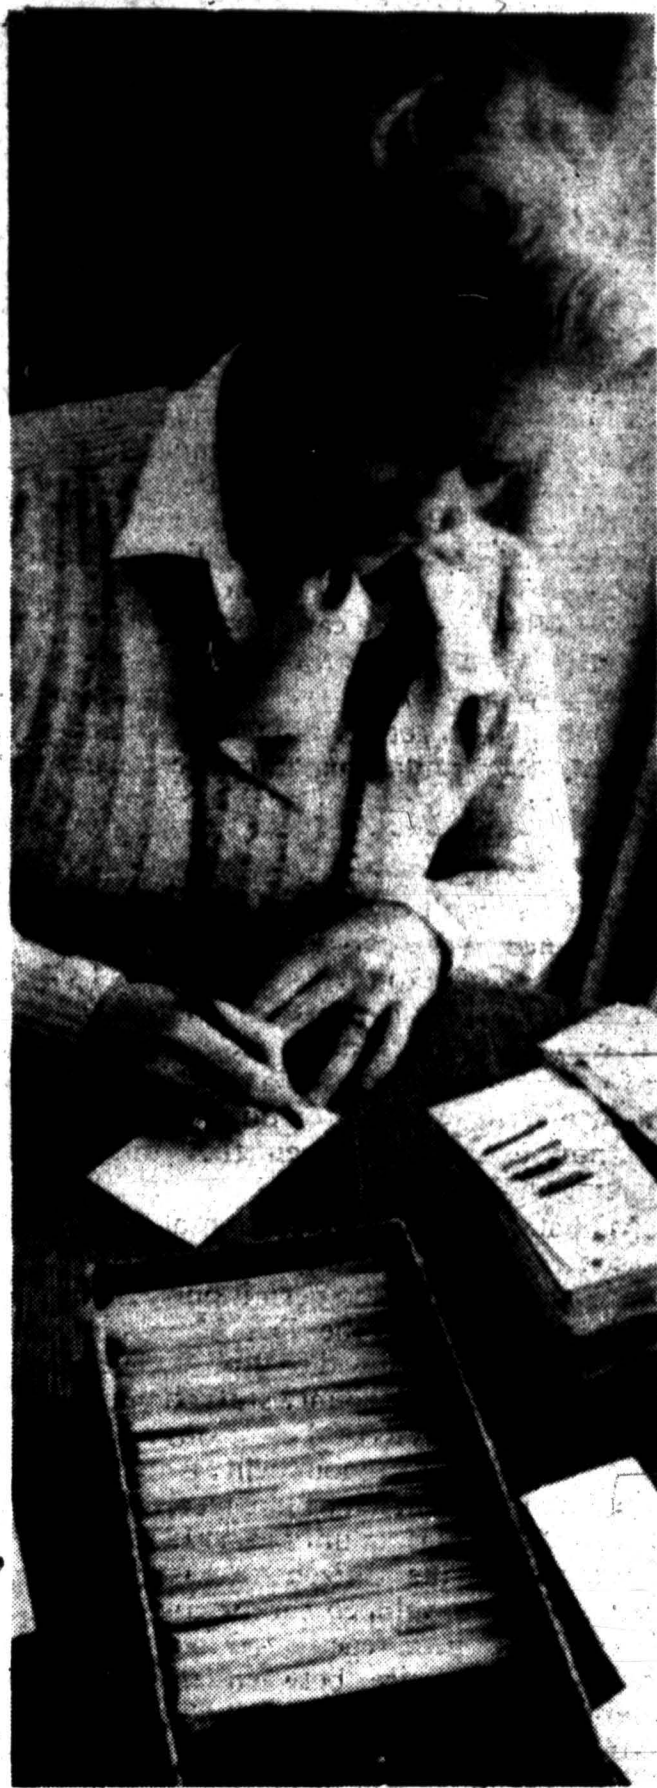

"It's just coincidental that Pacific Grove's reimbursement would not be cut... Nevertheless, the picture could change for us in future years based on the county budget, not our costs."

Under the consultant's recommendation, Pacific Grove's reimbursement would increase $5,000 over its current $20,000. That library's total budget for 1981-82 is about $250,000, she said.

Barbara Wynn, head librarian for Monterey County, said her budget for 1981-82 is $1,709,045, but she did not have enough information available to predict what impact the consultant's recommendation would have on the county budget.

She declined to support or oppose the consultant's recommendation, but added she hoped a compromise could be reached.

The Monterey County Library System currently operates 14 facilities: Aromas, Big Sur, Bradley, Carmel Valley, Castroville, Gonzales, Greenfield, Marina, Pajaro, Parkfield, Prunedale, San Ardo, San Lucas, Seaside and Soledad, according to the county librarian.

FRIENDS OF HARRISON Memorial Library will continue preliminary work on a campaign to inform the public about proposed budget cuts while county and city officials meet in an attempt to work out compromises. Lucette Kenan of Carmel is one of the Friends compiling a list of library users who live outside of the city limits. When the Board of Supervisors sets a public hearing on the proposed cuts to city libraries, members of Friends will contact the people on the list in hopes of getting them to contact supervisors in protest of the proposed funding cuts. Families battle river, bureaucrats

"WE'RE JUST sitting here scared to death that water will come up and get us."

Mrs. John Harris of 27401 Schulte Rd. has good reason to be concerned about the vagaries of the Carmel River.

During last week's violent rainstorm which pelted Northern California and caused the Carmel River to swell, the Harrises lost the roadway and gas and water lines to their home in Carmel Valley.

The Carmel River bit a chunk of earth some 30-by-150 feet in size from its banks and wiped out their access road — and along with it their gas, water and electrical lines. Also affected were Dr. Phillip Gallagher and his family, neighbors who shared the same access road and utility lines.

The two Carmel Valley families were without gas and water for four days as a result of the erosion and will split the estimated $1,500 cost of reinstallation of utility lines 15 feet up the river bank.

The question of rebuilding the roadway is considerably more problematical and expensive. The roadway and utility lines to the Harris and Gallagher homes existed through an easement across the adjacent property owned by Bard and Barbara Sherman at 27430 Schulte Rd., and it was unclear last week whether the property owners would agree on a long-term solution to reconstruction of the road.

Reconstruction of the road would only be possible after the riverbank is filled to replace material lost to the Carmel River.

"We've only gotten a one-year permission to reinstall the utility lines 15 feet up the bank, but I don't know what we'll do about the road," Mrs. Harris said. "It could cost $50,000 to $100,000 to put the road back in."

The Harrises — with their seven-year-old daughter — parked their vehicles along Schulte Road, drank bottled water, and kept warm with a wood stove most of last week as the utility lines were reconnected.

Dr. Gallagher, a chiropractor, left with his wife and their eight-month-old daughter to visit relatives in Los Angeles after the damage and was unavailable for comment.

Mrs. Harris said the entire episode points out not only the destructive power of the river but also the failure of humans to develop an effective river management program, complete with erosion prevention measures.

"This has been a total pass-the-buck situation," she said. "It's an outcome of the whole bureaucratic mess. Everybody knew that the whole river bank needed to be reinforced 100 yards upstream before the rains came. But nobody did anything."

JOHN AND CYNTHIA Harris of Schulte Road stand on the edge of what once was the roadway to their home, which was washed out by the Carmel River during the recent storms. The stretch of river bank washed out is about 50 feet upstream of the Schulte Road bridge.

THE AREA around the Schulte Road Bridge struck by the force of the rain-swollen river is one of 10 identified recently by the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District as having a high erosion potential.

On that basis, the county announced it would speed the issuance of permits under the floodplain ordinance to permit rehabilitative work in the river channel in those 10 areas. But costs of preparing engineering plans to accompany the river permit application proved prohibitive, Mrs. Harris said.

"The ordinance puts the cart before the horse," she said. "It would cost anyone at least $1,000 to $1,500 to do anything in the river, but you can't do it piecemeal because what one person does affects everyone else along the river."

The condition of the river will only worsen until there is some kind of comprehensive, unified river management program — and funds to implement it — Mrs. Harris said.

"We've gotten the feeling they're hoping the bridge will go so they can apply for federal disaster relief," she said. "We've tried everything. We've contacted all the agencies; gone to all those CREW (Carmel River Watch) meetings, and we've met with total frustration. I think everybody's waiting for the bridge to wash out."

The "final irony" which brought home the grim reality that no help was on the way for the Carmel River was the refusal by the Operating Engineers Union to permit Army personnel and equipment from Fort Ord to do necessary channel clearance in the river before the rainy season, Mrs. Harris said.

"It looked like the last ray of hope. Then the union man said they wouldn't allow it."

The county public works department installed four jacks to help stabilize the eroded bank, but those will wash away if the river rises more than five feet, Mrs. Harris predicted.

"We're just scared to death a rain next week will wipe out our new water mains we just put in," she said. "We can't really do much now because the river is running, and we can't authorize anyone to come in and drop concrete blocks because we don't own that part of the land."

"All the studies of the river have said to reinforce it 100 yards upstream, but nobody has done anything. They keep doing these stopgap things but it's such a band-aid approach."

Residents demand protection for Schulte access

SOME SIXTY residents of the Schulte Road bridge area in Carmel Valley petitioned the Board of Supervisors this week to "take more effective measures" to prevent erosion of Carmel River banks.

Property owners will readily give county public works crews access to their property to permit work to be done to reinforce river banks against further damage, the petition states.

It was signed by 66 residents in the area of the bridge — one of 10 spots identified by the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District for its high erosion potential.

After the rain storms that pelted Northern California last week, the access road to homes of at least two Carmel Valley residents was washed out by the swollen river. (See related story and photos in this issue).

Residents claim in their petition that the primary risk to property owners and residents isn't that the bridge itself will be destroyed, but rather that the approaches to the bridge might wash out.

"Failure to protect our access to the bridge will constitute gross negligence by the county in protecting the health, safety and welfare of its residents," their petition says. "Loss of this access will cut them off from the community and the necessities of living, causing severe mental anguish, emotional distress, and financial hardship."

Emergency measures undertaken by the public works department after the Jan. 5 erosion in the area of the bridge — which included the placement of jacks along the edge of the eroded bank — will not be sufficient to prevent massive erosion if the river rises, the petitioners claim.

"Imminent danger to the bridge approach can be remedied by emplacing riprap along the eroded river bank," the resident say in their petition. "The concrete is already available in the county stockpile. The property owners in this area will cooperate with public works to provide access to the eroded bank."

Don Wilson, maintenance engineer with the county public works department, said there is a stockpile of concrete riprap stored near Salinas, but the material is earmarked for county-wide use.

"It's for the Carmel and the Salinas rivers," Wilson said. "It's been stockpiled for the Davis Road bridge over the Salinas River, which washes out every winter. We'll protect the Schulte Road bridge abutments as best we can, but we've done everything we were going to do unless we get some direction from the Board of Supervisors."

River residents can help slow erosion by tying trees along the eroded river banks to other trees to stabilize them, Wilson said. This will slow the river currents along the bank edge and reduce erosion, he said.

River program hinges on a key issue: who should pay the bills?

By ROBERT MISKIMON

WHO SHOULD pay for restoration of the Carmel River to a state of health?

Development of a river management program — under study by the Carmel River Advisory Committee and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District — ultimately comes down to that political reality.

Everyone seems to agree that something needs to be done about erosion, flooding, and the death of riparian vegetation. But should property owners on the river who are most directly affected be expected to pay all — or a disproportionately larger share — of the costs of river restoration and management?

There are legal tools to accomplish alternative methods to finance a river management program, the Carmel River Advisory Committee members were advised recently.

David Laredo, attorney for the water management district, advised the committee there are special taxes, benefit assessments, user fees and other devices to finance a river management program.

The committee has discussed possible creation of an assessment zone which would be contiguous with the water management district. The rationale for that approach is that all consumers of water from the Carmel River have a stake in the condition of the river, whether they live in Carmel Valley or not.

Monterey County public works director Bruce McClain observed this week that if a lawsuit against California-American Water Co. by Carmel River property owners is successful, it may pave the way for such a district-wide assessment device.

That lawsuit alleges that a primary cause of river bank erosion is the death of riparian vegetation caused by the lowering of the Valley water table by Cal-Am wells, which pump water to the entire Monterey Peninsula. Thus, according to that argument, all Cal-Am water users are partially responsible for the condition of the river.

Although a district-wide assessment is possible, "a hybrid alternative" should be considered, Laredo advised the river committee.

"The hybrid approach would recognize that a portion of any riparian project directly benefits particular land parcels, and that the remaining portion enures to the benefit of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District as a whole," Laredo said.

THIS "HYBRID" approach would entail creation of a river improvement zone which covers only the benefitted lands. Such a zone could be formed without an election, or through an alternative formation process which requires majority approval, Laredo advised the committee.

"A benefit assessment would be levied within the zone to defer a percentage of improvement project costs. This assessment would be collected against parcels as a part of the property tax bills. The amount of the assessment could be variable according to varying zones of benefit."

The remaining percentage of the improvement project costs — under the "hybrid" approach — would be paid from general fund revenues of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. A user fee could be imposed on all affected water users to augment revenues, Laredo suggested.

"The user fee could be calculated as a flat rate or as a percentage of water use," he advised. "The user fee could be collected as a part of the water utility's bill."

"A zone would be created to allow performance of the project works and those properties receiving actual benefit would bear a proportionately greater share of project costs."

The 24-member Carmel River Advisory Committee has been charged with formulation of some type of river management program for consideration by the board of directors.

Water management district directors received Laredo's memorandum at their Monday meeting but took no action on the matter. In other business, the board:

- Authorized expenditure of $5,565 for a test to determine the feasibility of recharge of the Seaside aquifer by pumping water underground for storage from winter runoff

- Directed staff to recalibrate a flow gauge from the Carmel River. Initial test results of storms. The jacks at base of the bank were placed by the county public works department to deflect the river. (Photos by Mike Gardner).

the feasibility of creation of a fresh water barrier to prevent sea water intrusion into the Seaside aquifer were not promising, but additional storage by pumping is still possible, said manager Bruce Buel.

on the Carmel River below San Clemente Dam. Storage yield of a proposed new dam on the upper Carmel River may have been under-estimated by 20 percent because of the inaccurate gauge, Buel said.

NEW OFFICERS of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association for 1982 who were installed last week during the annual meeting at Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club are (from left): Robert Greenwood, vice-president; Barbara Olson, recording secretary; Jacqueline Marks, corresponding secretary; Jack Sassard, outgoing president; Lynn Morris, treasurer; Richard Dalsemer, president.

ficers also serve on the board of directors. Not present are directors Herbert Holbrook and Ann McGowan. (Robert Miskimon photos).

CVPOA recommends original site for service center

AFTER AN exhaustive investigation of alternate sites for a proposed Carmel Valley service center, a committee of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association recommends the original site at Carmel Valley Road and Valle Vista.

Directors of the CVPOA received the committee report at their monthly meeting Wednesday at the Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Station.

Developers of the service center proposed for a 7.5-acre parcel at 55 E. Carmel Valley Rd. hope to get the blessings of the CVPOA for their project.

Although the site is zoned for commercial use in the Carmel Valley Master Plan — which remains in effect until it is revised and readopted under court order — the project still faces stiff environmental review by the county before construction can start.

The CVPOA committee was appointed in October to research possible alternate locations for the service center after residents objected to noise, traffic and safety aspects of the project.

The committee concluded that several service centers may be necessary to eliminate "unsightly backyard operations in residential areas" of the Valley by servicemen, such as electricians, contractors and plumbers.

Five alternate sites for the proposed service center were investigated:

- The Carmelo School site owned by the Carmel Unified School District. It would provide six to 12 acres on a sale or lease basis available in June.

- The Sycamore Farm property located at the base of Laureles Grade Road and Carmel Valley Road. That site would afford two acres of land on a lease basis.

- The originally-proposed Valle Vista site, which contains 7.5 acres and which could accommodate 20 to 30 individual service operators.

- The Holt property at the foot of Robinson Canyon Road owned by the Carmel Unified School District. It would be available on a sale or lease basis in June and would provide 10 acres.

- The Berwick property situated at the western edge of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center. That property encompasses 23 acres with good access, the committee concluded.

The five parcels were ranked in the order of preference based on proximity to the Carmel Valley Village and Mid-Valley areas, "reasonable" price, safe and easy access, suitable zoning, adequate size, terrain, distance from the Carmel River, visibility.

The original site at 55 E. Carmel Valley Rd. was picked as the first choice by the committee. Second choice was the Carmelo School site; third was the Berwick property. The Holt and Sycamore Farm properties were tied in fourth place, said committee chairman Richard Nimmons.

THE FIVE sites were isolated from more than a dozen alternate locations surveyed by the committee, whose members included Louise Bishop, Stewart Clough, Peter Coakley, Mary Ann Matthews, William Parham, Jack Sassard, developer Jim Shakal, and Phil Wright.

In its report, the committee found "a need for some central facilities for a service center" to provide a central location for service providers whose operations are now scattered throughout the Valley.

"There are very few sites available for this kind of operation because of land use restrictions and economics," the committee found. "There must be more flexibility in zoning if this need is to be met. If the need is to be met, there must be more 'give' by planners, supervisors, and the community at large in zoning and community acceptance of a service center.

"Unless there is, this problem will remain unresolved and will result in more unsightly backyard operations in the residential areas of the Valley. The community must weigh the degree of legitimacy of objections by any group or property owner against the overriding and total interests of the Valley community."

Developers of the service center already have acquired the parcel at Valle Vista and Carmel Valley Road and expect to invest some $800,000 in the project. The county will require grading, septic, and road encroachment permits, which may subject the project to environmental review.

Master plan effects are felt even before it becomes law

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE CARMEL Valley Master Plan already has exerted an influence over development in the Valley before it has become law, says Monterey County Planning Director Ed De Mars.

"We're beginning to see some effects of the Master Plan, even before it's readopted," De Mars told the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

De Mars was one of several county officials who attended the CVPOA annual meeting Jan. 6 at the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club.

"We're seeing a better quality of development coming in for review by the county," the planning director said.

De Mars reviewed the history of planning in Carmel Valley, which started with the approval of the Carmel Valley Community Development Plan by the county in 1955.

That document was revised to form the nucleus of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, adopted by the county in 1960. Then in 1966, the Carmel Valley Master Plan was adopted as part of the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, De Mars said.

In 1980, an updated Carmel Valley Master Plan was adopted but then set aside by court order issued in response to a lawsuit by the city of Carmel, which demanded preparation of an environmental impact report.

Approval of discretionary building permits has been halted by the court until the Master Plan is revised — based on the EIR — and readopted.

"I'm not so sure I'd recognize a perfect (master) plan, even if I saw one," De Mars said. He outlined 17 developments proposed in the Valley despite the development moratorium, which is an indication of the need for sound planning, De Mars said.

Gwendolyn Buchholz, project engineer with Montgomery Engineers, outlined a Carmel Valley waste water study she performed for Monterey County and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

"If you counted every lot and had every dwelling unit possible, it would be 10,350 units in the Master Plan," she said. "If you only considered waste water, you could get 16,000 dwelling units in the study area."

"When you put on the land use constraints, the total drops to 8,550 units," she said. That estimated safe buildout limit contrasts with the 10,350 units projected in the Master Plan, Buchholz noted.

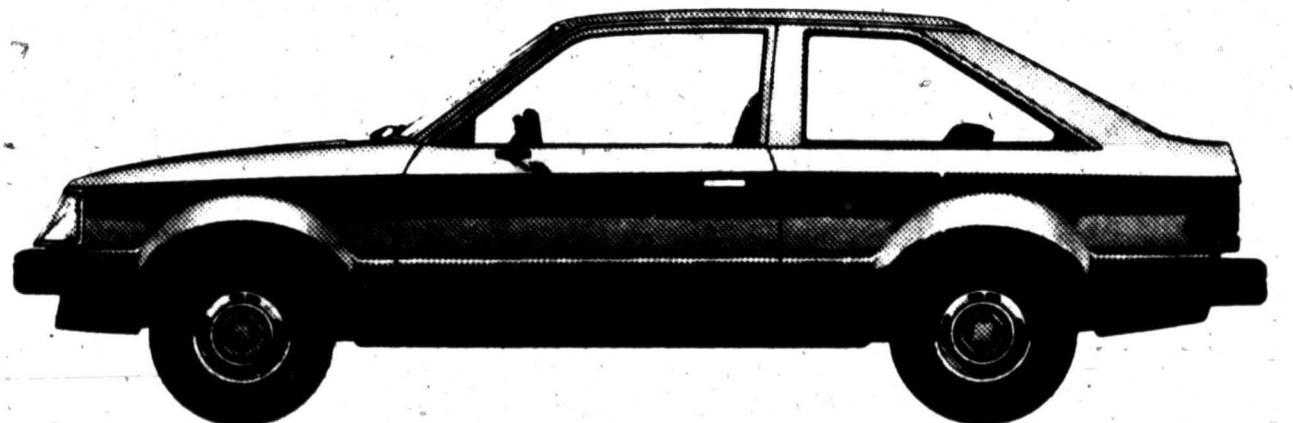

"In upper Carmel Valley, the number of units projected appears to be too high" because of ground water pollution caused by intensified use of septic systems, she added.

Carmel Valley attorney Alexander Henson asked De Mars why "trigger" mechanisms proposed by the CVPOA and the city of Carmel hadn't been explicitly dealt with in the Sedway-Cooke EIR on the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The proposed devices would halt development in Carmel Valley when air, water, noise, or traffic pollution reached certain defined levels.

"The process is to hold a hearing before the Board of Supervisors on the EIR," De Mars replied. "The staff will make recommendations at that time to the board. We are reviewing the (environmental impact) report in its final form and will make comments when we feel they're proper."

to film Carmel*

By FLORENCE MASON

The Business License and Code Review Board aired its concerns about filming in Carmel on Dec. 31 when considering an application by News Travel Network.

John Buchin, company producer, applied for a permit to film in and around Carmel on four days — Dec. 31 through Jan. 3. News Travel Network, he explained, is a syndicated service providing brief glimpses into various resort and vacation areas around the world. The programs are to be aired beginning in late January. All of the shooting in Carmel will be edited into a typical 90-second spot, probably on KSBW (Ch. 8) in this area; also on nearly 40 stations across the country.

In a letter accompanying the application, Buchin listed a number of stores, restaurants and inns his crew of three would photograph, both inside and out. That sparked a lively discussion.

Fred Stanley, Carmel Business Association representative on the board, questioned the selection of places to be included, pointing out that businesses not chosen might object to the free publicity given a few. Police Department Capt. Bob Fischer had other concerns: "We don't want to see you standing out there in the middle of the street or blocking pedestrian traffic," he said. City Administrator Doug Peterson chimed in, saying he, too, was leery of traffic congestion. He referred to the city's previous experience with filming and the objections of businesses inadvertently affected. Peterson suggested confining the activity to fewer days, at least the filming that would be shot on public property. Buchin said he would cooperate.

Buchin emphasized that the equipment would be limited and be very similar to that used for local news broadcasts. Moreover he said that he didn't expect to attract crowds or disrupt traffic.

Returning to the issue of selecting representative Carmel businesses, Sandy Swain suggested highlighting some of the courtyards that are so characteristic of Carmel's business district, pointing out that this would eliminate concern about selecting individual businesses.

Asst. Fire Chief Bob Updike sounded a conciliatory note: in his opinion a busload of tourists getting off at the Plaza creates more problems than this filming would.

Building Inspector Ron Warren, with the help of Planning Director Bob Griggs, drafted a motion that was ultimately approved with only one negative vote. The action permitted the filming, subject to restriction of filming on public property to not more than 10 hours, with no blocking of the public rights of way and no shooting from the street. Close coordination with the Police Department and the City Administrator was also specified. Capt. Fischer assured the board that the Police Department would not take any officers off their normal duties to supervise the activity, but would watch it closely.

After the vote, Warren added a note of caution for Buchin, saying that because of previous problems with moviemaking in Carmel, the image projected by News Travel Network would be projected onto the next person who wants to film in the city. To which Fred Stanley added: "Remember, you're a guest!"

The one negative vote was cast by Capt. Fischer. Later, he said, "It's a personal thing. I frankly don't believe that film companies bring that much to us and the confusion they create is greater than its value. I just don't like to see the business district — or the residential — disrupted."

As it turned out, according to Capt. Fischer, "Buchin did exactly what he said he was going to do; there were no problems whatsoever."

LEE BEASLEY — NEW FRIEND

The new year brought a new job for Lee Beasley, who came to Carmel from Atlanta to take up his duties as Executive Assistant of The Friends of Photography. It is a newly established position in The Friends, the world's largest membership organization devoted to creative photography.

Beasley's special realm will be the growing publications program of The Friends, including a monthly newsletter, a quarterly journal and photographic books and monographs.

He brings a degree in journalism from the University of Georgia and considerable experience with both daily and weekly newspapers in Georgia and Florida. Beasley has written feature articles on photography and other subjects for the Atlanta Journal-Constitution and Atlanta magazine.

In Atlanta he was also associated with a non-profit arts organization featuring programs in photography and other creative media. He was director of information for the Nexus Press and the Nexus Gallery of Photography and associate curator of the gallery's exhibition program.

The Friends has a membership of more than 11,000 and a full-time staff of eight headed by Executive Director James Alinder.

OPEN — AT LAST!

On Dec. 31 the fences finally came down; the Baobab Collection — and The Crossroads — were open for business! I found owners Dirk Daniels and Rod Lindsay at the Baobab Collection, excited because the last day of the year was the first day of a new adventure for them. It was easy to share their excitement in the ambience of their attractive store.

There is a spacious look, perhaps because so many of the items are either on the floor or on the walls. It is almost like going into an art gallery. There are rugs, each with its own design, illustrating some traditional and perhaps still secret symbol of African culture; story-telling tapestries; table runners and cloths; shawls; ostrich-skin bags in various sizes; a few of the many pictures they will have — all by African artists.

If you express interest, Daniels will probably show you his book of photographs taken at the sites of origin of these items. Every item is hand-made from hand-spun wool or mohair.

There are even some intriguing small pictures, for instance, a parrot created entirely from butterfly wings. (The butterflies are not killed for this purpose; they are used only after their short life spans end naturally.)

Daniels said — still conveying a sense of wonder — that it is hard for him to believe he is really here in a new country, a new home, with a new shop in a newly developed area. In spite of the fact that he has similar stores in Africa, Europe and Australia, this is the ultimate adventure!

"GOOSEBUMPS" — A BUSINESS?

There is a Carmel business called "Goosebumps." I don't know what pictures will come to your mind, but I was surprised to learn that it is a wholesale manufacturing business that produces silk screen paintings.

Daniel and Melissa Julien make the paintings. They are distinctive. During the Juliens' first season, their subjects were mostly animals. Coming now is a new line of vegetables and foods as well as a variety of other subjects, some whimsical. All the paintings are framed in round wooden hoops and they come in various sizes.

This interesting couple came to Carmel last July from the San Francisco Bay area for the usual reasons, and because Mrs. Julien came from Carmel originally. She is the designer for the company. The couple has a son who lives in Paris.

Julien said they entered gift shows in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle. "We were swamped with orders," he said. "Now we're getting ready for the next season."

Local stores carrying "Goosebumps" products include L'Animal in the Plaza, La Fille Du Roi on San Carlos, and one in The Barnyard: It's In The Bag.

Julien laughed when I asked him about the intriguing name. "We were looking for something we liked — and that was it!"

COME TO THE PARTY

Lee Chamberlin, executive secretary of the Carmel Business Association, promises that its installation party Jan. 23 will be one you won't want to miss. Among the attractions is a repeat appearance of that group of local businessmen/musicians — John Keller's Irregulars.

The party, and installation of officers, is at Rancho Canada. No-host cocktails will be served at 7 p.m. and dinner "around" 8 p.m.

AND THE WINNERS ARE . . .

Winners in the contest for shop decorations for the holidays: FIRST places to Antiques and Accents, Ellie's Hayloft and Hector de Smet's Bakery. SECOND prizes went to Luciano Antiques, Viking Sails gift shop and a special table in Spencer's on the Plaza. Our favorite was the Ellie's Hayloft window — a warm corner in an old-fashioned living room, appealing to the child in all of us. I was sorry to see it being taken down so soon — just three days after Christmas.

MARSHALL GROUP PROMOTIONS

The trend at the Marshall Group is one way — up — for several members of its growing staff. The local personnel service announced two major promotions: Jan Athow to manager of Career Temps, the temporary placement division, and Susan Sylvia from staff assistant to consultant.

Ms. Athow has two years' experience in the personnel field and six months with the Marshall Group.

Susan Sylvia has also been with the Marshall Group for six months. Her background includes ten years of sales and public relations.

SOME "WAKE"!

The juke box received flowers — red lilies — and at least one city official was among those who came to its wake.

Where? Where else but Sade's cocktail lounge, on Ocean Avenue. It was a gala occasion: the specially prepared chocolate cake had a juke box on it, and champagne flowed.

With great ceremony, Sade's juke box was unplugged at 10 p.m. on Dec. 29. The next day it was carted away by the leasing company. All this because of the city's prohibition against music when the "instrument" can be operated by the patrons.

"Let's say it was a compromise," said Ellie Burch, one of the owner's of Sade's. "The city wanted it out and we didn't want to make the city unhappy." A city official said, "Someone exerted informal influence."

Ms. Burch said Sade's now has a new and very fine music system that features vintage music, especially from the 30s and 40s. But the juke box — gone — will not be forgotten.

THANKS, CPD

Kudos to the Carmel Police Department, all of whose officers kept their cool (if not their dry) during the recent storm.

From the desk officers — handling a slew of calls about downed trees, broken wires, accidents, alarms false and otherwise — to the men out there covering both the business and residential districts, there was only concern, efficiency, and occasional much-needed humor. No impatience or resentment.

Those observations come from a dedicated scanner freak, so it's the truth!

Joe Feldeisen addresses Padre group

Carmel High School Vice Principal Joe Feldeisen was the featured speaker at the recent meeting of the CHS Padre Parents Board which met at the home of Bobby Hall.

Feldeisen expressed his sympathies on the death of Carmel High music director Henry Avila. He said student body officers have voted to contribute to a scholarship fund in memory of Avila.

Feldeisen also reported on final exams, student body elections, "Powder Puff" football game and luncheon, plus the February dance. He said the dance will have a 1950s theme and there will also be a showing of the film American Graffiti at lunch over four days.

Maureen Girard of Parents Who Care, said the program at Carmel Middle School is successful and encouraged continued participation at CHS.

The Padre Parents completed plans for the American Living History Theatre presentation of Abigail Adams. Performances are scheduled for Jan. 21, at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. for social studies students, and at 3 p.m. for other interested students. The program is funded by FOCUS.

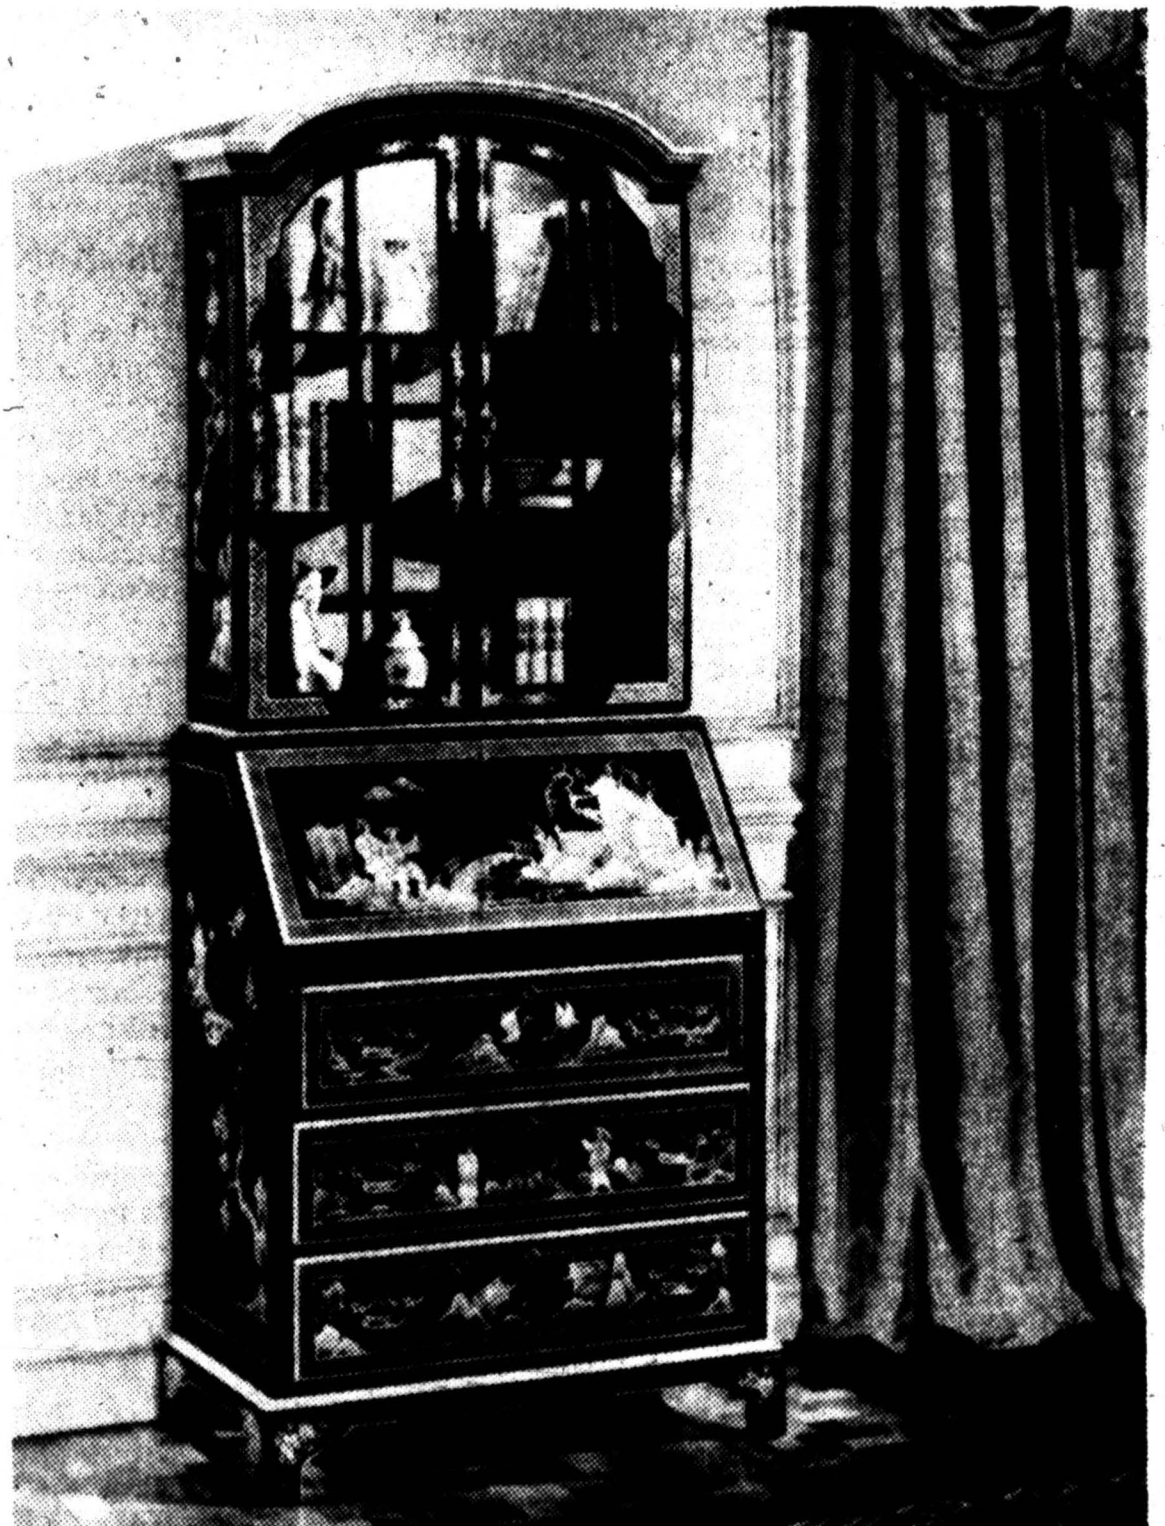

For the remainder of the school year, the Padre Parents Board will meet on the first Thursday of the month at 4:30 p.m. The next meeting is Feb. 4 at the home of Jerian Crosby on Martin Road.

Culinary Festival to benefit Guide Dogs for the Blind

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

When it comes to fund raising the Monterey County Committee of the Guide Dogs for the Blind always comes up with exciting ideas.

The most recent is the Culinary Festival which will feature lecture demonstrations by Jacques Pepin who has been chef to three French presidents, an author, teacher and columnist.

The four classes will be held on Jan. 19-20 at the Monterey Conference Center Steinbeck Forum. Tickets are still available and very reasonable. Just to whet your appetite I'm going to give you the four gourmet menus.

Mousseline of scallops
Saddle of lamb Provencale
Pommes savonnettes
Apple galette (Jan. 19, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.)

Cream of tomato soup
Filets de sole Claudine
Parsleyed Cucumbers
Omelette Souffle (Jan. 19, 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.)

Eggs Florentine
Poulet Fine Champagne
Rice Pilaf
Gateau Chocolat (Jan. 20, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.)

Chicken liver mousse
Braised stuffed flank steak
Carottes Vichy
Pears in Caramel sauce (Jan. 20, 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.)

Virginia Stanton, president of the local chapter of Guide Dogs for the Blind, is delighted with the Culinary Festival. She said that cooking, just like the organization's prior fund raising events, is very much in the field of the arts. Other fund raisers have included a luncheon with Stanley Marcus, founder of Neiman Marcus of Dallas, as guest speaker and flower arrangement seminars.

The guide dogs — German shepherds, Labrador retrievers and golden retrievers — are all bred at the foundation's main headquarters in San Rafael. When the puppies are three months old they are placed with members of 4H Clubs where they remain for one year before being returned to San Rafael for training.

The people who receive the dogs train for one month at the San Rafael headquarters which has excellent facilities. During that month the dogs and their new owners become acquainted. Together they learn to move about the facility, then San Rafael village. Part of their graduation exercise includes being able to cross Market Street in San Francisco.

"The ceremony is something no onlooker ever forgets," said Virginia. The 4-H member who has worked with the dog by taking it to market, on busses and in general making it aware of people and places to go, presents the dog to its new owner. If you can hold back the tears you're an unusual person."

Another part of the fund raising event will be a reception Jan. 17, for Jacques Pepin at the Pebble Beach residence of Mr. and Mrs. Taher Obaid.

Cochairmen for the entire event are Mrs. Robert Stanton and Mrs. Robert McMahon. Their committee includes Mrs. Henry Ragsdale, Mrs. Helen Spangenberg, Mrs. Lee Early, Mrs. C. Todd Singleton, Mrs. George Fletcher, Mrs. Jack Kakis, Mark Raggett, Bernie Threadgill, Bud Allen, Mrs. Sidney Lee, Mrs. Carl Menneken, Mrs. Peter Wright and advisor for the entire affair, Joan Keisel.

Chairmen for the reception are Mrs. Robert Meyer, Mrs. Kenneth Holland, Mrs. B.J. Lattner and Gilbert Craig.

Those wishing to participate in the Culinary Festival may attend any or all of the lecture demonstrations. More information is available by calling any of the above mentioned people. Do remember that it's all for a very good cause. As one of the 4-H Club members put it: "I'm so grateful I could help, because I know that the dog will be giving eyesight to someone less fortunate than myself."

FRIENDS OF HIDDEN VALLEY ENJOY PREVIEW

Friends of Hidden Valley met at the rustic theater in Carmel Valley last Wednesday evening to watch a rehearsal of the deathbed scene from La Traviata — with the performers garbed in ski jackets instead of the costumes they will wear when the opera opens Jan. 15.

The group heard the lovely voices of Cyndia Siedentop (Violetta) and Colenton Freeman (Afredo) of the San Francisco Opera Company.

The audience was warmed by libations and delectable nibbles. Appropriate for the weather, fur coats were much in evidence.

Peter Meckel, founder and director of Hidden Valley Music Seminars, asked the audience to imagine how the set, designed by Richard Seger of the American Conservatory Theater, would look when finished. He also introduced Milton Krieger who conducted the rehearsals.

New "Friends" in attendance included Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Christensen, Jr., Ms. Joyce Lake, Lee Hill and Mr. and Mrs. George Greenwood.

Among faithful Friends of Hidden Valley present were Muriel Dobry, president, Charles Haas, Virginia Stone, membership chairman; Mrs. Merle Strauch, Isabelle Brock, Mr. and Mrs. David Hughes and Kitty Ragsdale, all board members.

Others included Beata La Garde, the Drs. Frances and Maurice Sachs, Connie Langoe, Ruth Villafuerte, Virginia

Merz, Eric Fenton, Charlotte Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Trajan Ocneanu, Georgianne Matthews and countless others.

Many of the group had been together as recently as New Year's Eve when an unpublicized party for the Friends and supporters of Hidden Valley was held at the theater. This particular event offered Italian food, wine, dancing and songs by the Opera Ensemble.

CHRISTMAS TREES MAKE HUGE BONFIRE

Members and friends of All Saints' Episcopal Church celebrated "Twelfth Night" recently. Christmas trees, which just a few weeks ago were dressed in holiday finery, were used for a huge bonfire on the beach at the foot of 13th Street. Lee Hill added some new verses to the "Twelve Days of Christmas" for the group. The clear skies, white breakers and crisp air whetted appetites for the soup supper prepared by the Men's Club and waiting for the group back at the parish hall.

The festivities included showing the film, "The Last Epidemic: Medical Consequences of Nuclear War," produced by the Physicians for Social Responsibility and shown by Kevin Crown, Monterey Peninsula College program facilitator.

Petitions calling for a bilateral nuclear weapons freeze between the U.S. and Soviet Union were circulated by Jacqueline Smith, coordinator for Carmel.

Jackie, by the way, has just moved into the beautiful two-story cypress home designed by architect David Smith.

CYRANO de BEGERAC PLAY PLANNED

The Forest Theater Guild board has voted yes to producing Edmond Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac — to be directed by Ramie Wikdahl. Talented Ramie, who directed the Guild's production of Rashomon so successfully last summer, is busily working at bringing together her production assistants and technical crew.

TOM SPENDS SIX MONTHS IN LOS ANGELES

Just when I started asking if anyone has seen Tom Blecker, along comes a letter. Tom says that even though he loves Carmel, he's going to be stuck in Los Angeles for about six months where he's writing a movie script for producer/director Blake Edwards. The movie, The Judas Mission, sounds most interesting.

Tom plans to head north to Carmel on weekends, so we haven't lost him completely. In the meantime, here's wishing him "good luck" with his writing.

CLUBS HOLD MEETINGS

The Carmel Valley Garden Association held a meeting at the Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley, Jan. 12. Guest speaker was well-known local landscape artist, Alice Medhy, who talked on landscaping practices and problems. Those wishing to join the group or receive further information should call Shirley Clitherow.

Another group holding its first meeting of the year was the Spinnakers, the Woman's Auxiliary of the Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club. The "Apple Pie Soiree" was held at the Pebble Beach home of Mrs. Clarence C. Harvey.

Guest speaker for the affair was Lt. General Robert E. Coffin, newly-elected commodore of the Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club.

ANNUAL DINNER DANCE JAN. 16

The Board of Directors of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitors and Convention Bureau will hold their Annual Dinner Dance in the Monterey Grand Ballroom of the Hyatt Del Monte on Saturday, Jan. 16.

The evening will include cocktails, dinner and dancing to the music of the Mike Marotta Orchestra.

Along with the festivities there will be installation of officers and presentation of the Robert C. Littlefield Award and the Outstanding Citizen Award.

GARY TYRNAUER PERFORMED AT MIDWEST BAND AND ORCHESTRA CLINIC

Carmelite Gary Tyrnauer was one of more than 180 students from Interlochen Arts Academy (in Interlochen, Michigan) who traveled to Chicago's Conrad Hilton Hotel recently to perform at the annual Midwest National Band and Orchestra Clinic.

The students, all members of the Arts Academy Orchestra, Band and Studio Orchestra (jazz), performed in the hotel's Grand Ballroom before hundreds of high school aged musicians and their teachers at the conference held on Dec. 17.

Interlochen Arts Academy is a co-educational fine arts boarding high school with an equal emphasis on academics.

WINE AND FOOD SOCIETY GEARING UP FOR BIG YEAR

As always, the Wine and Food Society of the Monterey Peninsula is preparing for some exciting events for 1982. The kickoff will be their annual meeting (Jan. 14) and champagne dinner at Casa Serrano, the beautiful old adobe in Monterey.

Then in March comes the biggie — the President's Dinner, at which time the new president will be announced. The affair, which will be held at the Lodge at Pebble Beach, will be the group's 100th dinner, so look for this to be an extra special event.

WANDERING WHEELS DO A BIT OF WHALE WATCHING

There was no missing the string of young bikers giving their legs a good workout along Highway One last Friday morning. Traveling in small groups from their starting point in Monterey, they visited the Carmel Mission, then stopped at the baseball lot next to the mission for lunch.

Teacher Dan Davenport, who was traveling with them, explained that the 55 bikers were composed of students from four universities — Taylor University, Upland Ind.; Spring Arbor College, Mich.; DePaul University, Ind.; and Bucknell University, Penn.

The students are part of a group known as Wandering Wheels which started 15 years ago and has taken some 1300 kids from coast to coast. The students learn about art, history, photography and physical fitness. The organization has executives from various industries such as Braniff Airlines, etc. The tour price is wholesale for the students. The interesting part is that once students have made the trip, they usually send money to subsidize future trips for others.

NEW MEMBERS of Friends of Hidden Valley who attended the rehearsal are Joyce Lake and Lee Hill.

This group consists of 60 percent females and 40 percent male students. The three-week trip will end in Blythe and the students will visit missions along the way. They plan to travel 40 miles per day.

One bus and two vans, carry such things as food, bicycle parts and other necessities, provide support for the group.

Just to make certain that people know who they are, each bike is equipped with an orange banner and a sign reading Coast to Coast.

Leaving Carmel, the students said they planned to stop at Grange Hall in Big Sur with other stops at San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara. This is a first trip for most of the students who say they are fascinated with the coast — and whale watching!

Erickson returns from voyage

Navy Lt. Cmdr. David P. Erickson, son of Robert and Betty Erickson of Carmel Valley, has returned from an extended deployment to the western Pacific and Indian Oceans aboard the aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk.

As part of Fighter Squadron 31, Erickson participated in several exercises involving the 7th Fleet and those of allied nations. Ports of call were made in Australia, Singapore, the Philippines, Hong Kong and Hawaii.

The squadron was awarded the Navy Expedition medal and two Humanitarian Service medals for twice participating in the rescue of Vietnamese "boat people."

Erickson joined the Navy in February, 1967.

Young magician Ralph Verde of Carmel Valley wants to compete with the master magicians some day

Amateur magician Ralph Verde: 'Magic is the cup that holds the wine of wonder'

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

AMATEUR MAGICIAN Ralph Verde of Carmel Valley says he "dreams of the day when I can compete with the likes of master magicians Doug Henning and David Copperfield." And 19-year-old Ralph is determined that that day will come.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Sal Verde of Carmel Valley, Ralph is willing to work his way to the top, and finds total satisfaction in dazzling his audience with some spell-binding wizardry and whimsical entertainment.

"There's a real thrill to being on stage," said Verde, whose talents range from parlor magic and illusion to mentalism, juggling and puppetry. "I got involved with magic as a young child as way of getting attention. Now I'm convinced it will be my life's profession."

Verde freely admits that he's in the learning stage with a long way to go before he can call himself a professional. He has been seen on television and in theatres in central California and has provided entertainment for hundreds of private parties, clubs and benefits.

As a youngster he gave magic shows free of charge at backyard carnivals. His first break came at age 15, when the owner of a movie theater in Carmel Valley saw him work and offered him the theater stage for one night. They split the profits 50-50.

Verde, tall and good looking, bubbles with enthusiasm when talking about his work, and dots his conversation with humor. He feels that a bit of comedy is an absolute must when working with a magic act.

"Laughter helps one relate to the audience," said Verde, adding that it is in the area that many magicians fail to create a rapport with their audience. "The moment I go on stage I make eye contact and talk to people. If necessary I will rewrite my show right on the spot."

Verde performs magic shows for children as well as adults, and if the children are quite young he will do his entire act on his knees.

Verde, who frequently works with a pretty assistant, keeps his act up to date by attending yearly conventions. He also gets ideas from the magazine Genii, which is out of the Magic Castle in Hollywood.

"I'm not out to fool other magicians," Verde explained. "I'm out to entertain, and it's my opinion that the most creative magicians are those who come out of places where they've had no contact with other magicians. That way you're not doing the same tricks as everyone else. You learn to use your own ideas and make them work."

FOR HIS FIRST SHOWS Verde wore a tuxedo. He later wore a three-piece-suit, and still later a white silk, Oriental coat with jeans and white tennis shoes. "Now I've decided that a suit is more practical," he said. "But I still wear the tennis shoes even though my dad thinks I'm crazy to do so."

Naturally, Verde's friends hound him for the secrets to his tricks, but like a true magician he never tells. "It drives them nuts but they don't press," said the young magician.

No magician would be complete without good luck charms. Verde's include a 60-year-old table and wand that once belonged to the founder of RCA Victor who was also a magician. He also has a scarf which was used in his first big show, "The Merlin Scarf," at the Barnyard Theater about 3 years ago.

Verde, a 1980 graduate of Carmel High School, said that he has plenty of confidence, but that it was his acting in school plays that helped give him stage presence and taught him how to relate to an audience. "You can't be afraid," he emphasized. "You have to know that you're going to give a good show."

"Many people still think of a magician as someone who can make people float, pull a rabbit out of a hat, or do escape tricks," said Verde. "Actually those things are pretty much out of style, but the mentalism part of my act goes over well."

One of Verde's tricks is to ask someone in the audience to choose a word from the page of a book and then to hold the word in mind. Then from across the room he writes the word on a pad of paper and gives it to them. "It's terrific just to see the look of astonishment on their face with that one," Verde laughed.

Verde has chosen to devote his time to learning magic rather than go to college. He also holds down two jobs but says he has plenty of time to give shows. He is currently checking out local restaurants in hopes of landing jobs and is also interested in working on a cruise ship. He is also available for private parties, dinner shows and theater engagements and all of his bookings are through the family owned Greenback Productions.

Asked for his definition of "Magic," Verde paused for a moment and then said: "Magic is the cup that holds the wine of wonder — and the magician is someone who pours the cup so that everyone can drink."

"It's also just plain fun," Verde added. "It's a good feeling to be able to make people laugh or leave them with a sense of wonder. And that's exactly what I hope to do for the rest of my life."

Facts about hip dysplasia

By JUDITH A. EISNER

HIP DYSPLASIA is a problem that has long plagued serious fanciers of purebred dogs. If the name sounds scary, it should be. Hip dysplasia is an inherited condition in dogs. It is not contagious, but is transmitted genetically from affected parents and grandparents to future generations. It occurs most often in large, heavy-boned, fast-growing breeds and has been an especially serious condition in the German shepherd breed.

The Orthopedic Foundation for Animals (known in the trade as OFA), is an organization dedicated to supporting research into the causes and prevention of congenital hip dysplasia. It also offers a unique service to owners of purebred dogs through its program of interpreting and rating the hip radiographs (X-rays) of dogs.

OFA sends these X-rays to veterinarians who are specialists in radiology. They evaluate the X-rays independently and then confer a consensus rating on the dog. Dogs exhibiting no evidence of hip joint malformation are granted an "OFA number" and a certificate; dogs with hip malformation are rated on the basis of one (slight) to five (severe dysplasia). All ratings are kept confidential between OFA and the dog's owner.

By granting the owners of sound-hipped dogs a "clean bill of health" in the form of an OFA number, the organization hopes to encourage the use of these normal dogs for breeding and thus reduce the incidence of hip dysplasia.

IN ITS MILDEST form (grade 1), hip dysplasia may be totally undetectable by the average dog owner. Between grades 3 and 5, almost anyone living with an affected dog is aware that something is wrong.

Severe hip dysplasia can manifest itself as early as six weeks in the form of wobbling, limping puppies who may cry out in pain when they are touched on the hips or after strenuous exercise. But most often, dysplasia cannot be detected until the dog is almost a year old. OFA will not pass judgment on the radiographs of a dog under one year of age, and recommends that dogs be between 18 and 24 months for interpretation of their hip X-rays.

Hip dysplasia, most simply defined, is a malformation of the ball and socket assembly that constitutes the dog's "hip." The end of a healthy dog's thighbone is a round, smooth "ball" which fits into a correspondingly rounded "cup" in the pelvic bone. Held snugly in place by adequate supporting muscle structure and ligaments, this thighbone rotates freely and easily, allowing the dog painless and efficient movement.

In cases of dysplasia, the "cup" at the end of the thighbone may be malformed or flattened. Similarly, the socket in the pelvis may also be shallow, flattened or almost entirely absent. In severe cases, there is no contact between the thighbone and pelvic socket; in less extreme cases, the malformed thighbone may grate against the socket or slip loosely, causing pain and impaired movement.

Additional complications with hip dysplasia come from arthritis or osteomyelitis, an infectious, inflammatory disease of the bone.

As a dog owner, your first indications of hip dysplasia may be when your dog limps on one or both of his hind legs. This limping may occur sporadically and be most noticeable when the dog has run, jumped or played hard. When a dysplastic dog awakens from sleep, he may exhibit stiffness in his rear upon rising or may indicate pain by crying out.

Dysplastic dogs rarely have a smooth, free-flowing gait. Both German shepherds and Irish setters, two breeds with a high incidence of hip dysplasia, should walk and trot with a level topline. This means the dog's back should not bob up and down and his hips should not appear higher than the rest of his back. Dysplastic dogs usually exhibit an odd, hitching or lurching gait.

Dogs frequently manifest their discomfort by reluctance to jump into cars, climb stairs or chase balls. They may avoid a sitting position. Chances are, when you see a severely dysplastic dog, you'll know something is wrong with his hindquarters.

SADLY, there is no cure for hip dysplasia. It must be prevented by careful breeding of only OFA certified animals. If you have a dog who acts as though he may be dysplastic, only an X-ray (usually taken under general anesthesia) can accurately diagnose the problem. However, a manual and visual examination by a good veterinarian can usually give you an idea of the dog's condition.

Treatment for the moderately dysplastic dog consists of restricting his activity and discouraging rough play, running and jumping. The vet may prescribe aspirin or a mild painkiller. The dog should be kept in warm, dry quarters to lessen the chances of arthritic complications.

Severely crippled dogs who are in almost constant pain should be humanely put to sleep if the vet so recommends. Only selfishness can keep a sick, crippled and pain-ridden animal alive. Unfortunately, hip dysplasia does not get better and it frequently worsens as the dog ages.

If you already own a puppy of one of the large working or sporting breeds and are concerned about the possible development of dysplasia, there are some preventive measures you can take.

Keep the puppy on the lean side. Fat, roly-poly puppies are straining their soft, growing bones and muscles. Discourage the puppy from jumping and strenuous running. Feed a high-quality, high-protein diet and be sure your pup is receiving sufficient, balanced vitamins and minerals. The tremendous growth of the large breeds in the first year requires sound "building blocks" including adequate calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D to build strong bones.

Forestry, PG&E seek better cooperation

The Forestry Commission will hold a joint meeting with Pacific Gas and Electric officials Jan. 19 to discuss ways the city can cooperate when PG&E work needs to be done inside the city limits.

Commissioners believe the two entities should work together when PG&E crews need to install new lines or perform wiring repairs so that damage to trees is kept at a minimum.

City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio also is expected to report on his crew's work during the Jan. 4 storm.

Other items on the agenda include committee reports.

The Forestry Commission will meet at 1:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Carmel man serves President as personal emissary here

By MICHAEL GARDNER

JOHN OLOW has never met Ronald Reagan, but when the President wants a personal message delivered in the Monterey Peninsula area, his staff usually asks Olow to perform the job.

Olow is the Presidential Emissary for the Monterey Peninsula area, a job the Carmel man sometimes laughingly compares to being a "gopher," but one which he performs with great pride.

As an emissary, Olow said he handles jobs that relate to "protocol and etiquette" when dignitaries visit the Peninsula. He also serves as a personal courier for presidential messages to residents of the area.

Olow, who does not get paid for his efforts, describes his job as "very low key." He said the President likes to have his messages delivered personally because it "gives it more dignity than just dropping a letter into the mailbox."

"Many of these messages are personal. The President has limited time and cannot personally call," said Olow.

The most recent example of Olow's duties occurred in October when Reagan sent letters to Loretta Cadman and John Royse, who rescued two children from an automobile fire in Seaside.

In his role as emissary, Olow presented the letters at a meeting of the Seaside City Council.

Olow also served as a local escort for former First Lady Betty Ford during her highly publicized talk in Salinas last year concerning alcoholism.

When official functions such as meetings and luncheons are necessary, Olow said he helps with the preliminary organization work. "You know, who sits where with whom, who gets to meet whom and who is in the receiving line," he explained.

Olow has not personally met Reagan — he serves at the direction of the President's Director of Public Liaison, Elizabeth H. Dole, wife of Senator Robert Dole (R-Kansas).

Olow was never officially appointed to the position of Presidential Emissary, it just sort of happened.

"They (the Administration) know I'm here and supportive, so when I'm needed, they call me," he said.

A lifetime member of the Republican National Committee, Olow retired from the Army in 1974. He has lived in Carmel off and on since 1960.

Olow had a lengthy history of dealing with state, national and foreign dignitaries through his 30-year military career.

Olow said there were no politics involved during his military career, but he was often called on to assist when dignitaries visited the bases.

"It just seems that I was always tapped to assist. I've always been involved with this kind of work," he said.

Olow's military assignments took him to the far reaches of the globe and he was often stationed in politically touchy areas.

In the early 1950s, while stationed in the Panama Canal Zone, Olow, as assistant projects officer, was responsible for "etiquette and protocol" matters for a visit by then Vice-President Richard Nixon.

A decade later, Olow was a U.S. Military Aide to South Vietnam President Ngo Dinh Diem, who was later assassinated.

While stationed in Taiwan, he was assigned as a senior advisor to the Army under Chian Kai-Shek.

Prior to his retirement, Olow served as Chief of the Army Public Affairs Office in Los Angeles for Southern California.

After he moved to Carmel, Olow continued to be active in Republican politics, although he has never run for elected office. He prefers, as in his job as Presidential Emissary, to be "low key."

When not serving as Presidential Emissary, Olow breeds Arabian horses at the new Hidden Hills Ranch in Hidden Hills.

Olow and his wife of 31 years, Pauline, live in Carmel Meadows. They have four children, all living away from home: John III, Sebree, Christopher, and Alexander.

State to weigh local water project March 3

THE STATE WATER Resources Control Board has tentatively scheduled a public hearing March 3 in Sacramento to review the Carmel Sanitary District (CSD) Water Reclamation Project.

CSD Manager Michael Zambory said the board of directors will discuss the state meeting when it meets Monday, Jan. 18.

The hearing was scheduled at the request of the Pebble Beach Sanitary District, which is opposed to the project.

When the project is completed, the CSD plans to sell reclaimed water to Pebble Beach golf courses.

Zambory said $800,000 has been spent on the design portion of the project, which is about two-thirds complete. The entire project is expected to cost approximately 13.7

million. State and federal grants cover 87.5 percent of the costs.

During its meeting, Monday, the CSD board will also discuss a possible Pebble Beach appeal if Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver rules that the PBSB must pay one-third the costs of the water reclamation project.

Silver had earlier announced a notice of intended decision that Pebble Beach must pay, but has not made a final ruling.

PBSD President Richard Lord said he will ask the board to pay its share and then file an appeal if Silver rules against Pebble Beach. The PBSB will meet Jan. 15.

The CSD will meet at 1:30 p.m. in city hall. It normally meets on the third Thursday of the month, but the session was changed due to schedule conflicts.

Design Occupations gives students a chance for jobs

STORY AND PHOTOS
By MICHAEL GARDNER

THERE IS an old saying that you can not get a job without experience. But, how do you get the experience without a job?

Carmel High School offers a class that is specifically designed to help students build experience in the form of a portfolio which could lead to a job in the art community.

Called "Design Occupations" and operated through the Regional Occupation Program (ROP), the class is celebrating completion of its first semester with an exhibit in the foyer at Sunset Center, Carmel.

The exhibit, which continues through Jan. 31, includes examples of batik, water colors, pottery, quilting, pen and ink drawings, and embroidery, according to teacher Sue Williams-Pierik.

The foyer is open to the public one hour before a performance at Sunset Center. Special viewings may be arranged through the office of the director. More information is available by telephoning 624-3996.

Ms. Williams-Pierik, who has taught at CHS for 11 years, said "Design Occupations" came out of "the idea that this community represents itself as artistic and creative. I thought, why not have something to help the kids train for jobs out there."

The program offers a variety of subjects during the two-hour daily class time, including graphic design, fashion, photography, interior design and gallery management. The 16 students receive 10 units toward graduation, said Ms. Williams-Pierik.

"A lot of these kids will be able to get jobs to work as salespeople in the galleries and it could lead to graphic arts, and advertising positions," she said.

Ms. Williams-Pierik added that several students have used their training to make art objects for sale in local businesses.

Amery Burleigh, a senior, made enough money to pay for her Christmas presents.

Asked why she enrolled in the course, Miss Burleigh said she wanted to pursue a career in advertising design.

"Design Occupations offered me a variety of opportunities," she said. "I came into the class with a goal of getting my work out into the public. After the first month, my silk scarves were in shops in Carmel and Monterey. I wouldn't have done anything like that on my own. She (the teacher) has given me a lot of inspiration."

Senior Vicki Meinardus said she took the class because she wants to break into the field of interior design. She plans to attend a junior college in San Luis Obispo and then enroll at Cal Poly.

"The class has helped me a lot. It has helped me use my imagination and taught me how to use colors," she said.

John Winslow, also a senior, said he has been interested in art all of his life and the class provides him with the background needed for a career in commercial art or graphics.

"It has helped me tremendously, for sure. It's probably the best class I've taken at the high school," he said.

All three said they planned to take the course again next semester.

Ms. Williams-Pierik said the course is operated through the state-initiated and funded ROP curriculum. ROP plays most of the costs unless students need special materials for their own work.

Besides the regular curriculum, students also take field trips to galleries and artists' studios, attend seminars on employment opportunities and host guest speakers, she said.

Lodge plan is 'inconsistent,' Slimmon says

MONTEREY COUNTY Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon said he will find a proposed 24-unit lodge west of Highway 1 in Carmel Highlands inconsistent with county plan maps today.

Slimmon is scheduled to hold a public hearing at 2 p.m. in the county courthouse on Gurries Management's request for a use permit to build the lodge opposite the Highlands Inn.

"The Carmel Highlands-Carmel Riviera Master Plan shows that area as single-family residential," Slimmon said. "Visitor accommodations would be inconsistent with that use."

Once a determination has been made that the proposed use is inconsistent with the Master Plan, there is no need to order preparation of an environmental impact report, Slimmon said.

The hearing on the Gurries Management plan was continued from Dec. 30, 1981.

Deaths

Pearle B. Adams

Pearle Bennett Adams, 87, died Jan. 9 at her home in Carmel following a long illness. Mrs. Adams was a resident of Carmel for the past 16 years.

She was a member of the Carmel Woman's Club.

Mrs. Adams was born June 20, 1894, in Clinton, Iowa. She was a direct descendant of the Revere and Thayer families of Bainbridge, Mass. She was the first woman to obtain a chemical engineering degree at the University of Michigan.

Comedy workshop opens

If you've seen Chicago's Second City or San Francisco's The Committee, you know what improvisational comedy is about — actors ricocheting ideas off each other's skulls within a loose dramatic framework. Each show is different from every other. Some are wonderfully funny and some have very little comic appeal.

Lawrence Reilly, who has studied under the director of both Second City and The Committee, says he can teach improvisational comedy as well as mime, scene work and basic stage acting.

Reilly is offering a series of eight weekly classes beginning Tuesday, Jan. 19 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The fee is $20 for the eight weeks. At the end of the course, workshop members will be invited to join a new group, the Monterey Improvisational Theatrical Troupe, which will give performances at the Cherry Foundation next spring.

The only requirement for the workshop is to be over 18 years of age. Acting experience is not necessary. For more information phone 624-7491.

Father Farrell's wisdom

'You know best, Oh Lord'

Invocation to the Carmel Rotary Club
December 30, 1981

Help us to renew our dedication to service above self for that is what this human pilgrimage is all about. Without service to others it doesn't make much sense — does it?

One of God's great soldiers, the Basque, St. Ignatius Loyola (Inigo Lopez de Loyola 1491-1556) wrote these words in the 16th century:

"Teach us le Bon Dieu to serve Thee

As Thou deservest best

To toil and not to stop to rest

To give and not to count the cost

To fight and never to say that all is lost

To labor and to seek not reward.

Is not doing Thy will enough reward, Oh Lord?"

Just 66 years ago come Friday next, a Reverend Levi J. Puer, D.D., a Protestant Divine of Puritanical persuasion, prayed over the Council of Gloucester, Mass. His words shocked the city but we doubt if they shocked them into action. "We pray for those who are too lazy to vote but not too lazy to grumble; for those who believe all laws should be enforced except the laws they do not like."

"Perhaps it is too much to ask that they be blessed and the only thing you can do is to let them go to hell where they belong, but you know best, Oh Lord."

Finally we close with these thoughts from the poet Phyllis McGinley, my friend, entitled The Old Philanthropist:

"His millions make museums bright

Harvard anticipates his will

While his young typist weeps at night

Over a druggist's bill."

Amen

You've shown you really care about Carmel.

A little while ago, we asked the residents of the Carmel area by mail what we thought were very important questions.

We live and work here just like you do, so we wanted to know what you liked about our community.

What concerns you had about Carmel's future.

And what you thought an involved local bank might do to help keep our area one of the most livable and beautiful areas in the country.

The hundreds of responses we received showed how much the people of Carmel care about Carmel.

Almost unanimously, Carmel residents expressed a great love for their unique corner of the world.

With equal feeling and unanimity, you want to preserve and enhance the beauty and charm of Carmel.

A community as desirable as ours is bound to grow and attract visitors. The resulting traffic is a legitimate concern to many local residents.

A good many people placed great emphasis on environmental concerns.

Most of you were attracted to Carmel for its small town charm. You don't want excessive growth to change the character of the community.

It's helpful to know your feelings and concerns about the Carmel area. And what you think a local bank can do to better serve the community and you.

In the weeks and months to come, on the pages of this paper, we'll be continuing our dialogue with you on community and financial subjects of concern.

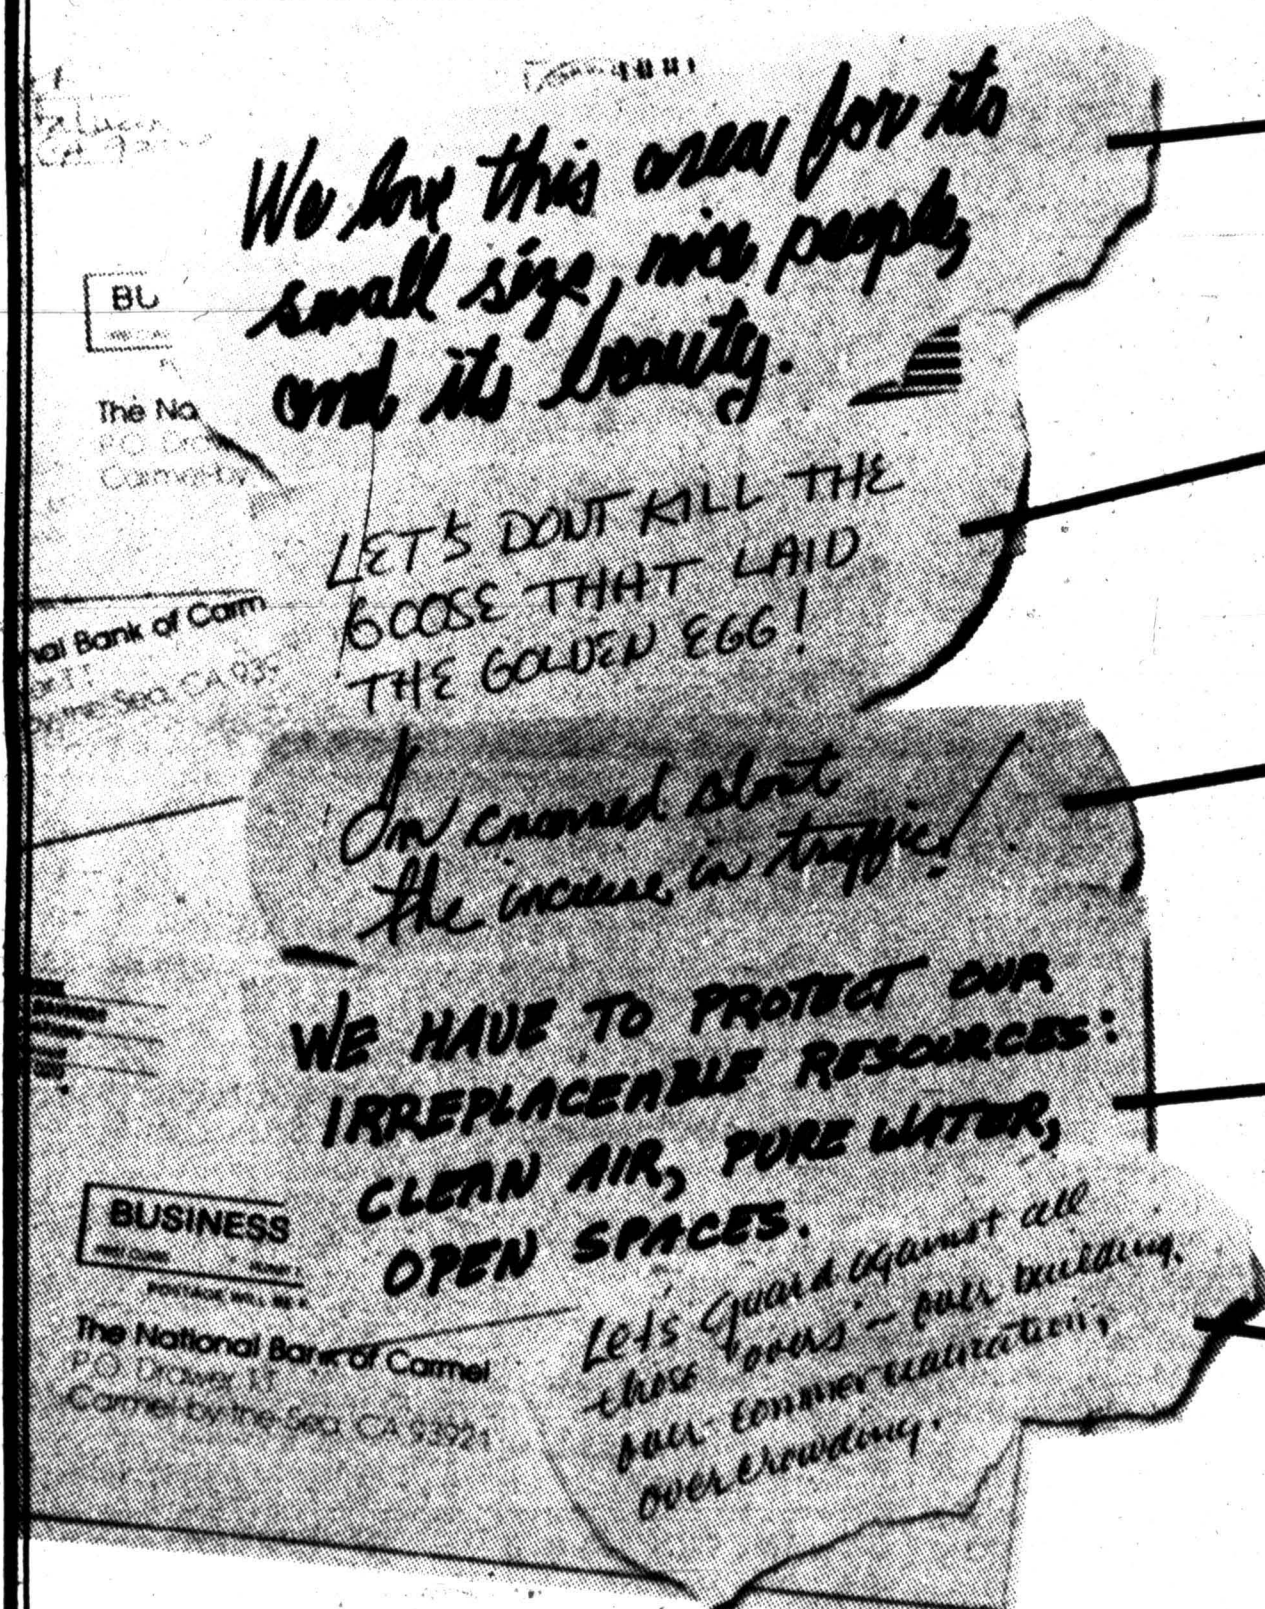

You see, we care about Carmel and the people who live here. Just like you do.

In our mailing, we also asked the people of Carmel what a local bank like us could do to make banking better.

Again, hundreds of you had very definite opinions on that subject.

One thing we didn't expect were so many responses in words similar to what one lady wrote:

"Thank you for asking!! That's a good place to start."

Hidden Valley opera season opens

Rossini comedy, Verdi tragedy

Operas by two Italian masters, Gioacchino Rossini and Giuseppe Verdi, will open the 1982 Hidden Valley opera season Thursday and Friday, Jan. 14-15.

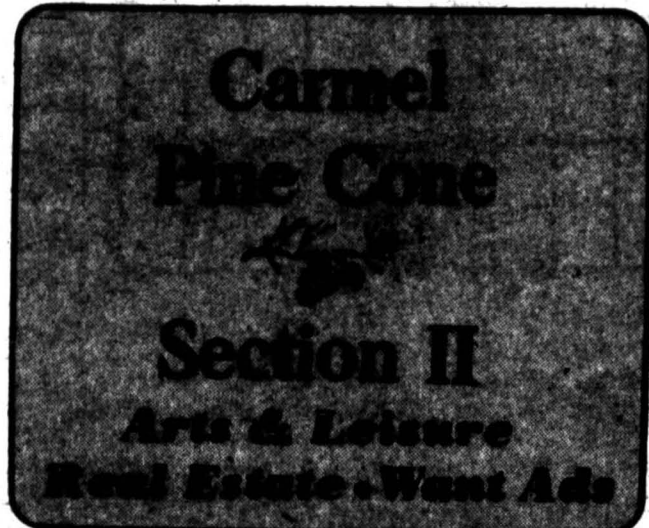

At 8 p.m. this evening Maestro David Effron will raise his baton to begin Rossini's La Cenerentola, a comedy based on the classic fantasy, Cinderella.

At 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 15, Effron will conduct Verdi's La Traviata, the famous tragedy based on Dumas' The Lady of the Camellias.

La Cenerentola tells the story of Prince Ramiro and his valet, Dandini, and of their efforts to find a suitable wife for the prince. Don Magnifico's three daughters include the lovely but poorly dressed Cinderella. Mistaken identities, a matched set of bracelets and a marvelous musical storm combine to present an outstanding production designed to delight young and old alike.

The production stars Gail Dubinbaum as Cinderella and Reginald Pittman as Prince Ramiro.

La Traviata tells of Violetta, a French courtesan who is afflicted by love and tuberculosis in about equal proportion. She meets her beloved Alfredo but they are soon separated, only to be reunited at her death-bed.

Cyndia Siedentop stars as Violetta, and Colenton Freeman as Alfredo.

La Cenerentola will be performed at 8 p.m. Jan. 14, 16, 21, 23, 28, 30 and Feb. 6. There is a 2:30 p.m. matinee Feb. 7.

La Traviata will be staged at 8 p.m. Jan. 15, 22, 29 and Feb. 4 and 5. There will be 2:30 p.m. matinees Jan. 17, 24 and 31.

Tickets are $10 except on Thursdays, when they are $8. The theater is located at Ford and Carmel Valley roads, Carmel Valley. For information or reservations, phone 659-3115.

THE PATHOS of Giuseppe Verdi's La Traviata is reflected in this tragic scene between French courtesan Violetta (Cyndia Siedentop) and Germont (Duane Clenton Carter). La Traviata is one of two operas staged by Hidden Valley and opens Jan. 15. Gioacchino Rossini's La Cenerentola, a comedy based on the classic Cinderella, opens Jan. 14. Curtain time for the shows is 8 p.m. (Chuch Scardina photo).

Borodin Trio performs Tuesday at Sunset Center

MEMBERS OF THE BORODIN TRIO study a Beethoven score — perhaps the one they will play in Carmel Tuesday, Jan. 19 at 8 p.m. in Sunset Theater. Left to right they are: Rostislav Dubinsky, violin; Luba Edlina, piano; and Yuli Turovsky, cello. Tickets are $6 general admission and $2.50 for students and enlisted personnel at the door.

The Borodin Trio, descendant of the celebrated Borodin String Quartet, performs at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 19 at Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Ensemble members are Luba Edlina, pianist; Rostislav Dubinsky, violinist; and Yuli Turovsky, cellist. They will play trios by Tchaikovsky, Shostakovich and Beethoven.

The Trio was formed in 1976, when Dubinsky and Edlina, who are married, left Russia with their friend and colleague, Turovsky. Prior to 1976, Dubinsky was first violinist of the Borodin String Quartet, but chafed under travel restrictions imposed by the Soviet regime on that group.

For example, Edlina often performed with the Quartet and made recordings with them, but the Soviet government permitted her and her husband to leave the country together only once in 20 years.

Turovsky was the 1969 winner of the Soviet Cello Competition and in 1970 was a laureate in the 22nd International Prague Competition. He appeared as cello soloist with the Moscow Chamber Orchestra until he left the Soviet Union.

Tickets to the concert are $6 general admission and $2.50 for students and enlisted personnel at the door. For more information phone 624-2993.

The first series, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 15-17, will highlight 15-20 performers each night in five-minute segments before a live audience. The second weekend, Jan. 22-24, will feature the best of the first round of auditions. All performances will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Those interested in auditioning for the first series of shows should phone Jim Clark at 624-1531.

STATE FLOWER IS 'SLEEPY'

The Spanish name for the California poppy, the state flower, is dormidera, "the drowsy one," because the petals fold in "sleep" at evening.

Film review:

Musical melodrama

By LISA JENSEN

Pennies from Heaven is a musical melodrama with a serious identity crisis. Adapted by Dennis Potter from his British TV mini-series, the film borrows the elaborate song-and-dance routines from the vintage movie musicals of the thirties in an attempt to expose the musical genre as a hoax.

However, director Herbert Ross never strikes a balance between the frolicsome musical production numbers and the tale of Depression-era misery that supports them. As a result, for every moment of stylish bravado and sassy innovation (and there are many scattered throughout the film), there are at least two of cliché-ridden, melodramatic despair.

Steve Martin plays Arthur Parker, a traveling sheet-music salesman in 1934 Chicago. Arthur clings to the notion that life can be as happy as the lyrics to the songs he peddles, despite the deprivation around him.

When his frigid little wife, Joan (Jessica Harper) recoils from his advances, or the bank manager turns down his application for a loan to open his own shop, Arthur is unfazed. He merely retreats into a fantasy world where all his wishes come true in lavish production numbers choreographed to the cheery recordings of the day.

Things pick up briefly for Arthur when, while on the road, he has an affair with a shy schoolteacher named Eileen (Bernadette Peters). It so threatens Joan that she gives him her small inheritance to open his store.

But the business fails, and Arthur sneaks off to visit Eileen, only to find that she has been "ruined" by her liaison with him and forced to become a prostitute. They run away for a brief fling before Arthur is arrested on circumstantial evidence for a lurid sex crime.

It's reminiscent of film noir. But without the flashy vigor of those old potboilers, the humorless dramatic sequences in Pennies from Heaven can't work. Ross' direction slows the scenes to a crawl, and the melodrama slogs along without a trace of the wit and self-awareness that gives the musical numbers a sly audacity.

Arthur is much too limited a character to carry the show. Martin throws himself into the role with emotional intensity, and he performs his complicated dance routines with considerable skill and energy.

But the total philosophy that governs Arthur's existence is his simplistic belief that life and sex should be as much fun as they are in the songs. Since no other thought on any other subject seems to enter his head, we lose interest in him. Worse still, this plodding creature doesn't seem to possess the imagination to dream those beautiful musical dreams.

And what dreams they are! The musical numbers in Pennies from Heaven are breathtaking, not only in their clever design and stylish execution (Danny Daniels choreographed), but in the wry sophistication with which each carefully chosen number plays on the thematic undercurrent of the scene.

The visual style carries into many non-musical sequences as well, particularly when Ross frames his characters in stark, poetic compositions borrowed from the Depression-era paintings of Edward Hopper. The film's visual piece de resistance is a movie house sequence that begins as a Hopper painting with Arthur and Eileen in the audience, and ends with them merging seamlessly into the black-and-white images of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers on-screen, dancing the "Let's Face the Music and Dance" number from Follow the Fleet.

In these isolated moments and in the production numbers, Pennies from Heaven makes its point surely and skillfully. The rest of the time, the overburdened project threatens to collapse under its own weight.

Stretch your way into better shape with exercise course

A new exercise class has been added to the popular DanceXercise program at Sunset Center gym. Taught by Susan Sartwell of Carmel, the class deals with stretching exercises for men and women of all ages.

"Stretching reduces muscle tension and helps the body relax," explains Sartwell. "The process of stretching and exercising properly will stimulate circulation, increase the range of motion, prevent injuries such as muscle strain and prepare the body for strenuous activities. Stretching is a way of signaling the muscles that they are about to be used."

Because Sartwell's teaching methods are gentle, this is an excellent class for beginners. Students do not have to be in top physical condition or have special athletic skills to participate and enjoy themselves.

Classes are taught from 7 to 8 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, and at 6 p.m. on Wednesdays. The cost is $2.50 per class, or $2 per class for eight classes a month. Bring a towel and wear comfortable workout clothes.

Newcomers may simply drop in at the Mission St. entrance of the gym at class time, or phone Sartwell at 659-3898.

A retrospective exhibit of Barrow photographs

A retrospective exhibition of photographs by Thomas Barrow will open at Friends of Photography gallery in Sunset Center, Carmel, on Friday, Jan. 15. There will be a preview and opening reception in the gallery Friday evening, from 8-10 p.m. The public is invited.

Widely respected as a teacher, curator and critic as well as a photographer, Barrow has had a significant impact on the direction of creative photography during the past decade. He has produced a body of work that explores, through a variety of media and imagery, notions about the nature of our unexplores, through a variety of media and imagery, notions about the nature of our understanding of photography. The exhibition at Friends of Photography presents photographs made between 1969 and 1981 drawn from several distinct groups of work. Included are photographs from the series Cancellations, Libraries, Pink Stuff and Pink Dualities, as well as spray-painted photographs and prints from additional series.

Born in Kansas City, MO, in 1938, Barrow received a BFA degree from the Kansas City Art Institute and an MS degree from the Chicago Institute of Design. In 1965 he joined the staff of the George Eastman House in Rochester, where he served in curatorial, administrative and editorial positions before moving to the University of New Mexico in 1973. He is currently a professor of art at the university.

In recent years, Barrow's photographs have been included in a number of group shows that have attempted to define contemporary trends in the medium. These include Altered Landscapes at the Florida School of the Arts, The Photographer's Hand at the Eastman House, Photo Facts and Opinions at the Addison Gallery of American Art and The Markers at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art.

His prints are a part of many public collections, including the Museum of Modern Art, the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard, the New Orleans Museum of Art and the National Gallery of Australia.

Students to see special play on Abigail Adams

A special live theatrical production, Abigail Adams: Revolutionary Woman, will be performed for Carmel High and Middle School students on Thursday, Jan. 21 at the high school.

The one-woman show stars Judy Mueller, who also wrote the play about the woman who was the wife of one president and the mother of another. An individual in her own right, Abigail Adams spoke out on women's rights and social injustice. Ms. Mueller plays Abigail, sharing her thoughts and dreams, in an intimate living room setting.

The performances, for students enrolled in U.S. history courses, have been funded by FOCUS (Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools).

There will be no charge to students who attend the performances.

Backgammon

The only real chance

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 2-1 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it? (Note: that Black has a man on the bar.)

If you bear a man off the 2-point and then move over to safety on your 1-point, you will lose the game in perfect safety. You will avoid leaving blots while you bear off two or three more men, but Black will soon come in and will then win the race.

Your best chance to win the game is to bear off two men at this turn, leaving blots on the 1-point and 2-point. If Black fails to come in, it has cost you nothing. If he comes in, you will be on the bar and will have the chance to send another Black man back (unless Black has safetied both of his blots by rolling a one in addition to bringing his man in from the bar).

If you can get two of his men back you will have a really good chance to win the game. Otherwise you must try to bear off at least seven or eight of your men before Black gets in from the bar.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Martial arts classes offered

Jerry Alan Johnson, Chinese Kung-Fu instructor, will teach three courses, in Chinese martial arts at Sunset Center, Carmel.

The first, Tai Chi Ch'uan, is taught Tuesday and Thursday from 7:30-10 p.m. and costs $35 a month.

Second is self-defense for women, a course that includes instruction in personal safety, rape prevention and various methods of breaking away from an attacker. This course meets from 7:30-10 p.m. each Wednesday, and costs $25 per month.

Northern Shaolin Kung-Fu is the most interesting of the three classes, if the names of the exercises signify anything. Besides the drunken monkey form, there is the small tiger, the big tiger, the eagle claw, the lotus leopard, the golden eagle sword and the windy air sword, to give only a partial list. This course meets from 7:30-10 p.m. Monday and Friday, and costs $35 a month.

Johnson is a certified instructor through martial arts organizations in Taiwan. For more information phone 899-0713 or 624-3996.

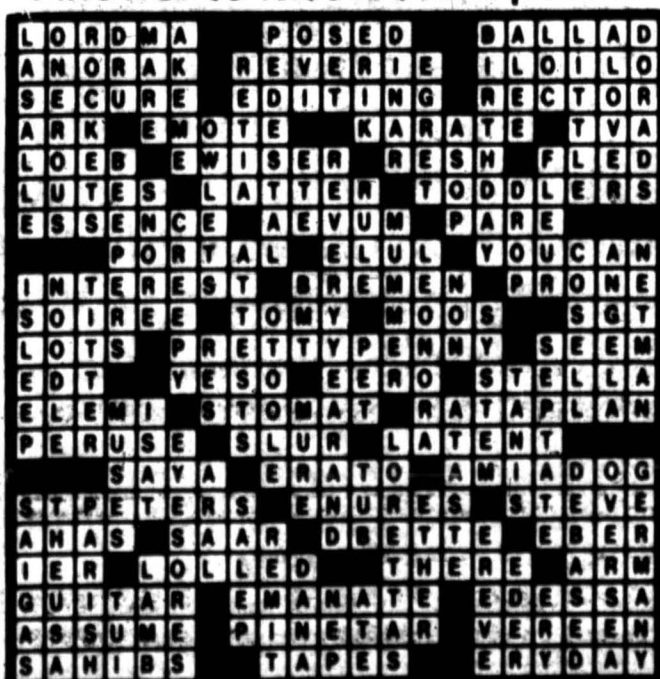

Audubon Society program on birds

"Albatrosses and Other Birds of Midway Island" will be the title of a program by Norma and Richard Masten presented to a meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society at 7:30 p.m. tonight at Canterbury Woods Auditorium, 651 Sinex, Pacific Grove. The meeting is free and public.

On Saturday, Jan. 16, the society sponsors a "topless" — meaning leaderless — birdwatching expedition. Meet at 9 a.m. behind Safeway in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. For more information phone 624-3402.

Answer to last week's puzzle

Hike, climb with local Sierra Club

The Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club plans two outings this weekend, both involving an eight-mile hike and some climbing.

The first hike goes from Bottcher's Gap to Devil's Peak, a 23-mile drive from the gathering place, the parking lot behind Brinton's Hardware in Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. Meet there at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 16. Bring food, water and $2 for carpool fee. Details: 372-6738.

The Sunday hike follows a scenic trail along Los Padres Reservoir and the Carmel River to a lunch stop at Bluff Camp. The meeting place is again Brinton's at 8:30 a.m., or the Bank of America parking lot in Carmel Valley Village at 9 a.m. Bring water, lunch, boots and $2 for carpooling. A pair of old tennis shoes would come in handy for fording Danish Creek.

For more information phone 624-3052, evenings.

EYES GLOWING LIKE COALS, Medusa stares malevolently at her next victim. And yet her chiseled features are beautiful beneath the snaky hair, a beauty symbolic, perhaps, of the enduring allure of evil. George De Groot painted Medusa for his show, Greek Gods, Goddesses and Heroes, now on display in the Beardsley Room of the Carmel Art Association, Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel, through Feb. 3. The exhibit is free. Details: 624-6176.

Secret Hideaway on First Avenue

You could easily pass this house without noticing it, a subtle asset of many Carmel homes, one that contributes to our overall European flavor. Here (a couple of doors west of Monterey Street), the secrets are contained behind a grapestake fence covered with greenery. Open the gate and follow the winding path to an elevated patio—part flagstones, part redwood—and you begin to discover them.

Doors from the entry and dining room open to this oak-shaded patio, and a great triple picture window looks out from the living room. The entry is a small hall; living room and daytime areas to the left, bedrooms and baths straight ahead, then right and left.

Every room in the house (except the 2 baths) is beamed and roofed by redwood planks. In the living room, a spacious 22 x 15 center, these are painted white. Everywhere else they're natural.

The focus of the living room is a great white stone fireplace, directly across from the patio windows. The chimney breast projects slightly, the hearth is raised, and shuttered casements bring light from each side. Below them, bookshelves stretch to the corners.

Behind this is the vaulted dining room, an intimate chamber just off the kitchen. Redwood ceiling, vinyl brick floors, double window on the patio and a Dutch door opening to it. The kitchen is close by, compact, efficient, with all appliances in place and included. A small laundry and pantry space is just beyond it, with a service door to the outside.

The two bedrooms are located at the rear corners. They're large (15 x 12 and 12 x 12), and both have corner windows overlooking nicely planted areas. The guest bath lies between them, straight back from the entrance hall. And the master bath, with a huge shower, is privately contained within the master suite.

The garage is detached, set slightly below the house level, with an inside door through which one can cross the patio with complete privacy and safety. There's the kind of walled-garden, utter privacy charm in this place that one expects to find in Carmel. It's old enough (36 years) to be an integral part of its landscape, new enough and loved enough to be in pristine condition. $229,500.

Otter Cove

Just a scant six miles south of Carmel, across Malpaso Creek, a locked security gate guards the entrance to Otter Cove, an exclusive development of only 17 sites, each distinctly different in shape and terrain but all sharing, in perpetuity, frontage on the ocean.

Every site enjoys unobstructed view of surf surging shoreward to cascade over rocky islets and churn snowy seafoam into narrow inlets — and this soothing wavesong is a solace to the soul.

Inside the surf-line on still, sunny days, sea otters floating on their backs munch shellfish in quiet coves like the one pictured above — and from which Otter Cove derives its name.

Awaiting exploration along the oceanside boundary of each Otter Cove site are the fascinations of abounding tidepool life. Fishing off the rocks is another pastime to be enjoyed by owners of property in this seaside setting. Whales spouting at sea, cormorants in congregation, soaring seagulls, the slow passage of pelicans — and always the drama of the ocean unfolding from sunrise, through daylong changes of light and tide, to the glory of sunset, later in mystic moonlight — all these wonders are among the joys offered owners of Otter Cove sites. At present, only three are available, each a now rare oceanfront property. They are: 1.42 acres, $375,000 — 1.42 acres, $475,000 — 1.38 acres, $575,000. May we open the security gate and show them to you?

MILLIONS VISIT

The Monterey Peninsula annually plays host to nine million visitors, according to the Visitors and Convention Bureau.

Culinary festival to aid Guide Dogs for the Blind

Jacques Pepin, one of the most talented chefs in the country, will give four demonstrations of French classic cordon bleu cooking as part of a two-day Culinary Festival sponsored by the Monterey County Committee of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc.

The demonstrations will be given in the Steinbeck Forum of Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 19; and during the same hours Wednesday, Jan. 20. Each lecture will cost $25.

Pepin will prepare delicacies including as mousseline of scallops, saddle of lamb Provencale, filets de sole Claudine, and pears in caramel sauce. He will draw on his own rich experience as an apprentice chef in Bourg-en-Bresse, France, heartland of la cuisine fran- caise, then to Paris to become personal chef to three French presidents, including Charles de Gaulle.

His next move was to the United States where he went into the kitchen of the celebrated restaurant, Le Pavillon. He has written four cookbooks, and now travels the country lecturing and giving demonstrations.

Besides appearances by Pepin, the Culinary Festival will feature a bazaar de cuisine featuring the latest in cookware, and table decorations by the California Wine Institute. There will be several door prizes, including a Cuisinart food processor.

Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., will raise nearly $50,000 if it can fill the Steinbeck Forum for each of the four Pepin appearances.

For reservations or information phone 625-3023.
